Quiet Reigns In Batavia After Period Of Fighting

Batling Begun By Rebels Tossing Two Grenades at Ambonese Sentry

Batavia, Java, Nov. 5 (AP)—Batavia was quiet again tonight after almost 12 hours of sporadic street fighting, but British military authorities reported Indonesian massing in central Java, and said the situation was "tense."

At least one native was shot and one British officer was wounded in a flare-up in northern Batavia.

The fighting started after Indonesian tossed two grenades at an Ambonese sentry, the British said. British signal troops also were fired at from a vehicle moving in the street. The driver was shot.

A Seaford Highlander captain who went to investigate this shooting was struck by a bullet fired at random by an Ambonese Dutch guard.

Efforts to negotiate a settlement of the dispute between the Dutch and the Indonesians were at a standstill. The Dutch were reported planning to bring in more troops—possibly 20,000—before Christmas.

President Soekarno of the "Indonesian Republic" was asked what the next move would be. He remained silent, but his secretary, who was present, said:

"I think there will be much more fighting."

Protest From Australia
Sydney, Australia, Nov. 5 (AP)—The New South Wales Trades Labor Council tonight sent urgent telegrams to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Information, alleging that "Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten had 'capitalized on Dutch imperialism'."

The council also protested against Dutch soldiers going ashore in the Netherlands East Indies wearing Australian uniforms.

Youth, 20, Pleads Guilty to Drunk Driving Charge

Arthur Warren Woodmansee, 20, husband of pretty 14-year-old Nanette Bruce Woodmansee, yesterday was given a 90-day suspended sentence and year's probation on a driving-while-drunk charge by Municipal Court.

Woodmansee, whom his young wife charged with being a habitual drinker since he was 15, was released on $500 bond last month when he first pleaded not guilty to the drunken driving complaint in Municipal Court. Yesterday he admitted guilt to the charge and Judge Ellen K. Raedy handed down the verdict.

Nahle, who finished the eighth grade at Alice Deal Junior High School last June, asked for termination of their year-long marriage in District Court on grounds of cruelty on October 12.

Nahle now is living with her mother at 3725 Macomb st. n.w., while her husband's address is listed as 3220 Connecticut ave. n.w.

Composer Kern, 60 Suffers Stroke on New York Street

New York Nov. 5 (AP)—Jerome Kern, 60-year-old composer of "Show Boat" and many of America's best loved songs, collapsed on Park ave. today and was taken unconscious to a hospital, the victim of an apoplectic stroke.

Kern was said to be "slightly improved later, and had regained consciousness."

Kern, who wrote "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "Ol' Man River," and other musical hits, arrived in New York Friday from the West Coast to supervise rehearsals in a revival of "Show Boat."

Mexico City, Nov. 5 (AP)—Gen. H. H. Arnold, United States Army Airforce commander left at noon today in a United States Army plane for Washington. With him went Ambassador George S. Messersmith, called by the State Department to attend the United States-Mexico water treaty exchange of ratifications.

British Dock Workers Back as Strike Ends

Communist Press Charges U. S. Planes Joined in Action

Chungking, Nov. 5 (AP)—Both Washington and Chungking denied today a Chinese Communist charge that U. S. Marines had gone into action in China's civil war, reported blaring in the north.

K. C. Wu, the Chinese minister of Information, declared the Communists deliberately spread the report "to fan up feeling between China and America and provoke American public opinion to demand the suspension of whatever aid the United States is giving the Chinese government."

The Communist New China Daily News alleged 14 U. S. planes had strafed a Red-held town, that Marines fired on the Communists, led an attack north of Peiping, and threatened to attack strongholds with the might of the fleet.

Destroying Railroads

While Chungking awaited a reply to its peace offer made over the weekend, Communists were said to be attacking or destroying vital railroads in north China. Fears were expressed they might try to beat Chung's troops into Manchuria, with its all-important heavy industry.

An official dispatch declared the badly outnumbered Nationalist garrison at Kweisui, previously reported seized by the Reds, still held out.

One Communist column of 10,000 was battering at the northeastern suburbs, and other columns were closing on the city. The Communists fought into Kweisui's railway station Sunday afternoon.

Assaults Launched

The Communists' new fourth army, 40,000 strong, had launched assaults on the Peiping-Hankow and Tientsin-Pukow railways, important arteries leading into North China, a government source claimed. This source asserted 30,000 Communist troops were marching on the railway terminal and port of Lianyungang, 340 miles west.

Senator to Ask Army Inquiry Over Slow Release of Doctors

Expressing continued dissatisfaction with the rate of discharge of Army doctors, Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.) said yesterday he would introduce a resolution in the Senate today calling for an Army Board of Inquiry into the conduct of the Surgeon General.

His action, Reed said, has the concurrence of Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), acting chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and of Senator Sheridan Downey (D., Calif.), chairman of a Military Affairs Subcommittee, which has been investigating discharges of medical personnel.

The situation in respect to discharges of doctors from the Navy is "as bad if not worse than that of the Army," the Kansas Senator declared. He added that it might become necessary to call for an official inquiry into the conduct of the Navy's Surgeon General.

Reed said he had been receiving letters from all over the world regarding discharges of doctors.

He released the text of a letter from Lieut. Comdr. Clifford C. Wilson, Medical Corps, USNR, sent from Okinawa.

"We are a group of 32 medical officers and 300 enlisted men," Wilson wrote, "who have been here almost three months without a single duty. Theoretically, we are Base Hospital No. 22, but actually we have no hospital and have never had. The hospital was never built."

8 of Chinese Taken In Raids Held for Grand Jury Action

A Chinese laundryman, with $12,000 worth of opium in his possession, was arrested yesterday morning. He was seized shortly before the arraignment of 11 other Chinese, who were among 125 persons arrested early Sunday in a mass raid against dope traffic.

Chia Kin Ying, 44, of 605 I st. n.w., the latest suspect was charged with violation of the Harrison Narcotic Act and violation of the Jones-Miller Act. He was arranged before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, who set bond at $8000 and ordered the hearing continued to November 19.

Six Jars of Opium Seized

Narcotic agents said he had three jars of prepared opium, three pounds of crude opium, a box of rice paper and other paraphernalia in his possession.

Meanwhile, Leroy W. Morrison, chief of the local narcotics bureau, Treasury Department, indicated light court sentences here for drug law offenders have encouraged peddlers. He pointed out that the average sentence in District Court is eight months, as compared to 38 months in Baltimore for similar violations.

Commissioner Turnage yesterday dismissed the case of one of the 11 Chinese brought before him, a coroner's jury charged a driver with negligent homicide in another recent traffic fatality.

Latest victim was Harry S. Stalley, 73, of 1306 F st. n.e. He was struck by a street car last Thursday at 7th and D sts. n.w., and died at 2:10 a. m. yesterday in Emergency Hospital.

During the day Allen Baer, 27, of 560 Connecticut ave. n.w., was held guilty of negligent homicide at a coroner's inquest into the death of Ira Nelson, 70, Negro, of 1146 21st st. n.w. Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, presided at the hearing.

Nelson was hit Saturday night at 13th and N sts. n.w. by a car operated by Baer and was pronounced dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital. Baer will be arraigned in Police Court this morning.

Inquest Date Not Set

No date was set for the inquest into the death of Stalley, a Navy veteran of two wars and a retired employee of the Treasury Department.

The streetcar which struck Stalley was operated by Fred T. Carpenter, 53, of 5613 7th st. n.w.

Stalley, who is survived by his wife, eight children, 28 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren, served on the battleship Maine. He was transferred from it 10 days before it was blown up.

Inquests into two more traffic deaths will be held by Dr. Murphy at 11:30 a. m. today at the morgue.

These inquests involve the deaths of Mrs. Christina Herrmann, 49, of 491 F st. n.w., and William H. Culley, 75, of 4404 Butterworth pl. n.w. Mrs. Herrmann was fatally in-

Fumes of Gas Coil Kill Daughters Of Bullis School Faculty Member

Mrs. Alice Virginia Welch, 34, wife of a faculty member of the Bullis School, Silver Spring, Md., hanged herself yesterday at Eastport, Md., several hours after her two children had been killed by gas fumes, the Associated Press reported.

The husband is Lieut. Comdr. George W. Welch, who was placed on the Navy's inactive list about a year ago.

The children, Ellen, 2, and Barbara, five weeks old, died from the effects of fumes from the coil of a gas refrigerator. Dr. John C. Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner, said.

Neighbors discovered Mrs. Welch's body hanging from a tree in the yard of her home. She had used a rope from a children's swing.

An investigation by Dr. Claffy and Sgt. A. D. Meade of the Eastport police disclosed the bodies of the children in the dining room of the home.

Dr. Claffy said that the children had apparently been dead for several hours.

He said that Mrs. Welch left a note to her husband complaining of bad health and dependency.

Dr. Claffy issued a verdict of suicide in the death of Mrs. Welch and ruled that the children had died from the effects of the gas.

German Alien Deserter Faces Trial in Wyoming

Walter Korten Koch, German alien Army deserter, yesterday pleaded not guilty to violating the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act and was placed under $2500 bond in an arraignment before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Koch, charged with driving a stolen car from Cheyenne, Wyo., to Mayfield, Ky., in June 1942, was committed for removal to Wyoming.

Koch told FBI agents, who captured him in downtown Washington Saturday night, that he had come here four days before to seek employment.

German born, Koch was inducted into the U. S. Army at Fort Leavenworth in September, 1941, and escaped from Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyoming in 1942.

Bus Officials Again Reject Arbitration

Government Effort To Reopen Wage Talks Fails; New Walkouts Loom

By John F. Gentry

Government efforts to bring Greyhound company officials and union leaders together to reopen wage negotiations fell flat yesterday when company officials reaffirmed their stand not to arbitrate.

However, it was expected that Labor Secretary Schweienbach would take a personal hand in the bus strike, which already has tied up Greyhound lines in 27 States, and urge the disputants to meet here "in the interests of public need."

Other Walkouts Expected

Meanwhile, leaders of the AFL Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees Union said that they expected two more Greyhound companies' workers in the South and Southwest to strike last night. The lines involved in the latest strike threat are the Teche Greyhound Lines, Inc., with 2500 workers, and the Dixie Greyhound, with 900 workers.

If the predicted walkout comes, daily bus travel of an estimated half million persons in 33 States will be paralyzed. Nearly 5000 Greyhound employees are involved. Nevertheless, some hope that the strike of the Southwestern Division employees might end, came when union leaders there and Paul W. Tibbets, president of the Southwestern Greyhound, said that they were willing to resume negotiations. The negotiations were scheduled to be held Thursday before the Regional Conciliation Service in Fort Worth, Tex.

Matter of Principle

R. W. Budd, president of Central Greyhound, Inc., said that the company's refusal to arbitrate was a "matter of principle."

"At the request of the union we made our top offer at the outset of negotiations. That offer was not intended to be the base for arbitration. It is our honest, top offer and is final."

A spokesman for the Labor Department's Conciliation Service yesterday said that the AFL union leaders sought a directive from the Labor Department calling for a public proposal to arbitrate. Their attempts to bring labor and management arose out of that request.

The Conciliation Service also tried to induce the parent company, Greyhound Corp., which owns the eight strike affected companies, to enter into negotiations in Chicago, Ill.

Ivan Bowen, general counsel of the Greyhound Corp., told The Post from Chicago that the "par-

Navy Officers From Financed Colleges Urged

By John W. Ball

A plan for federally subsidized college education for thousands of young men to provide junior officers for an expanded peacetime Navy was uncovered by the Navy Department yesterday.

The plan falls into four categories: 1. To increase the size of the Naval Academy to about 6000 (about twice its present enrollment). 2. To enroll about 17,000 in the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps courses in 52 NROTC colleges to provide needed officers for the fleet. 3. To make possible appointment to full Navy commissioned status of selected men from any accredited college. 4. To enroll 7000 at Federal expense at any accredited college for basis schooling for naval aviation.

Board Officers Program

A complete change in the whole NROTC plan is contemplated in a program presented to the Secretary of the Navy by a board of officers and civilian educators headed by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, president of Williams College; Dr. Henry T. Head, president of Illinois Institute of Technology; Capt. Felix L. Johnston, Capt. Charles P. Wheelock, Capt. Stuart H. Ingerson, Capt. John P. W. West, Arthur S. Adams, retired, of Cornell University; Comdr. Charles K. Duncan and Comdr. Douglas Swift.

Plans Outlined

Details of the plan are as follows: NAVAL ACADEMY: appointments to be made as at present modified to permit four or more nominations without priority for each vacancy, with navy selection of the best candidate from among those nominated.

Scientists to Lecture

Congressmen Will Go to School To Learn About Atomic Power

By Robert C. Albright

Legislators on both sides of the Capitol yesterday called on top atom scientists for more light and elementary guidance in advance of legislation to control atom power.

The House Military Committee recommended prompt action on a War Department bill to control atomic energy in this country, but opposition to rush legislation spread in both Houses.

1. The Senate's new Atomic Energy Committee "borrowed" Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, to be the committee's own scientific adviser. The Senate group will learn about atomic energy from the ground up, receiving initial "instruction" at the Bureau of Standards Thursday night.

2. A House group of 18, led by critics of abbreviated hearings recently held by the House Military Affairs Committee, invited every House member to a meeting Thursday to hear first hand views of the atomic bomb scientists themselves. The meeting will be addressed by Dr. H. C. Urey, Nobel Prize winner; Dr. Leo Szilard, another key figure in production of the bomb; Dr. Condon, and Dr. L. B. Borst, chairman of the Oak Ridge Atomic Scientists.

Invitations for the House seminar were issued as Military Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) favorably reported his committee's bill for stringent domestic controls. The invitations made no direct reference to May's bill, but the scientists will be questioned about it at length.

Saying "this is perhaps the most important problem affecting the future of mankind which has ever been presented to any legislative body," the invitations suggested: "Many members of Congress have expressed a desire, before voting on this all important question, to hear from scientists who have devoted years to the study of atomic energy and who participated in the production of the atomic bomb."

The Senate's 11-man Atomic Energy Committee, headed by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), meanwhile decided to strive for at least a rudimentary understanding of atomic energy before moving on to hearings on the policy field. As part of their initial quest for knowledge they will visit some of the plants in the famed "Manhattan project" and possibly go to the New Mexico scene of the first atomic bomb test.

Besides borrowing Dr. Condon from the Commerce Department as their principal adviser, the Senate group named 35-year-old James R. Newman, former special assistant to Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, as special assistant to the committee. A former lawyer and graduate student of mathematics and physics, Newman recently served as assistant deputy director of the Office of War Mobilization.

Small Holders Far Ahead in Hungary Vote

Returns Indicate Party Gains Since Budapest Victory

Budapest, Nov. 5 (AP)—The moderately conservative Small Holders Party appeared tonight to have won a sweeping victory over Hungary's left-wing Social Democrats and Communists in the first general elections held in Russian-occupied eastern Europe since the war's end.

Early returns from yesterday's election indicated the new middle-of-the-road party—made up of small shopkeepers, small landowners and professional men—would get about 60 per cent of the total vote. That would represent a slight gain over the party's recent surprise victory in the Budapest city elections.

The Laborite Social Democrats were running second, with an indicated vote of about 20 per cent of the total, and the Communists were expected to poll about 12 to 15 per cent.

A complete count will be delayed until returns are in from all districts.

The overwhelming victory of the Small Holders will undoubtedly result in formation of a new government.

It was regarded as certain that Zoltan Tildy, Methodist minister and head of the Small Holders Party, would succeed Bela Miklos as premier.

There was every evidence the elections were conducted in complete freedom. It appeared, therefore, that Hungary had removed one of the obstacles delaying full recognition and the restoration of normal diplomatic relations with the United States and Great Britain, which had indicated they would not recognize governments of former enemy countries unless they were chosen in free election.

Urged to Keep Up Defenses

London, Nov. 5 (AP)—Home Secretary James Chuter Ede today warned the British people against believing they never again would be subject to air attack, and urged that the nation's wartime civil defense organization be kept up to date.

He asked Commons to support a bill which would suspend, rather than repeal, Britain's civil defense acts of 1937 and 1939, and the lawmakers passed the measure on second reading without a dissenting voice.

Laborite Tom Stokes demanded that "representations" be made to Russia against a reported plan to expel 4,500,000 Germans from the Russian occupation zone of Germany into the British zone. Hector McNeill, parliamentary secretary of state for foreign affairs, said the government had no knowledge of the reported plan, but that it had "called for an immediate report."

Earlier a British business leader declared Germany now has "three times more machinery than she had in 1929 . . . and it would not take her very long to get ready for any new adventure she may care to embark upon."

Ede announced that Britain had sent commissions to Germany to study "saturation attacks" of all kinds and the way in which German (air raid) services functioned and that scientists had been sent to Japan to investigate the effects of the atomic bomb.

"In due course," he declared, "we should know more of civil defense requirements and the best methods of dealing with air attacks. These investigations are now proceeding."

Truman Sets Goal as Labor And Business Heads Confer

Leaders Are Given Rebuke, Warning As Momentous Conference Opens

By Alfred Friendly

Assembled in the most momentous domestic conference of the decade, the Nation's 72 most influential labor and management leaders yesterday plunged immediately into the issue that may make or break their deliberations—whether or not to consider the economic problem of wages.

The lines of division were formed on the first day of the President's labor-management conference only a few hours after Mr. Truman opened the session by giving the delegates a rebuke, a warning and a goal.

Told People Don't Like It

The rebuke: The American people did not expect and "do not like" the amount of industrial let-loose after V-J Day, "especially after the solemn promise by representatives of management and labor that they would cooperate with their Government through the reconversion period."

The warning: If labor and management do not solve their problems by agreement among themselves, the people will find the answers "some place else." The President did not say it, but the implication of restrictions imposed by Congress was clear.

The goal: Resolution of labor-management differences without stopping production through direct bargaining and, if bargaining fails, through "a willingness to use some impartial machinery" of a fact-finding nature.

Wages Held Real Issue

But the real difference between management and labor, the real subject of the collective bargaining which the President urged is the matter of industrial wages, according to CIO head Philip Murray. He spoke at the afternoon sessions of the conference after William Green, president of the AFL, had thundered that inclusion of the wage issue "would make failure of this conference a foregone conclusion."

Similarly, Ira Mosher, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, coldly observed that his group was "not here to meet demands"—obviously an allusion to labor's current wage drive.

The position of Eric Johnson, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, was not clear, but he appeared to favor some discussion of the matter. One of the four "fundamental principles" he asked the conference to consider was that "the consumer, the worker and the investor must all share equitably in the fruits of increased productivity. Their respective shares might be labeled lower prices, higher wages, sounder profits."

Wallace Agrees With Murray

And while Secretary of Labor Schweienbach ducked the issue in his address to the conference, Secretary of Commerce Wallace devoted his entire speech to the premise that "the question of greatest interest . . . is, of course, the old problem of the relationships between wages, profits and prices." His argument ran foursquare with Murray's—that basic wage rates must be raised substantially with increased prices to protect the Nation's prosperity.

As the conferees met in the imposing Labor Department Auditorium they were spotlighted in the glare of public opinion just as truly as they were in the brilliant beams of huge movie camera spotlights. The eyes of the American people were on them, the President declared, because "every citizen in our Nation has an identity of interest and a great stake in the maintenance of industrial peace and in the development of mature and effective ways of achieving it."

Judge Stacy Presiding

The delegates sat on both sides of two enormously long tables, placed at right angles to a "high table," where were seated Judge Walter P. Stacy, conference chairman, and George W. Taylor, com-

Terminal Leave Cash Bill Passes House

DIARY NOTES: The House yesterday passed the bill to make lump sum payments for terminal leave to Army and Navy officers who will accept civilian Government jobs. The bill goes back to the Senate for action on minor House amendments. . . . The House also took final action and sent to the White House a bill that will allow former employees who were disabled during military service to gain Civil Service retirement benefits without returning to their old jobs. . . .

STATE: It's only a high-placed report at this stage, but the Office of Strategic Service, or an international intelligence service akin to it, may be recreated as an independent agency. This is the talk at the State Department. It seems that a good many persons believe an error was made in scuttling most of OSS in these days of the atomic bomb. . . .

EMPLOYEES: Employees' spokesmen yesterday asked the Senate Civil Service Committee to vote Federal workers more than 20 per cent raises as proposed in the Administration bill. James Burns, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, urged a raise of 23.2 per cent. Arthur Stiles of the United Federal Workers of America, asked for a flat 30 per cent, and Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employees, endorsed the bill but said the 20 per cent was not sufficient. . . .

WHY: Burns said the average white-collar worker is making less "real" money today than he was in 1941. He said a 9 per cent raise should be added to the 1941 base to offset the soaring cost of living. The AFGE, he said, was opposed to the $2800 ceiling on full overtime pay and asked that it be removed. . . .

DOWNGRADINGS: This wide practice in Government was hit by NFE's Steward. He charged it was a breach of promise on the part of the Government to downgrade jobs where the responsibilities remained the same while the incumbents, with whom contracts were made, held onto them. . . .

RATES: A good many employees have asked how much more money they would get if the Downey bill is approved. It's very simple. All you need to do is to add 20 per cent to your present base salary. For example, the CAF-2, who now gets $1704 annually, would be raised to $2044.80, which would become the minimum annual rate for the vast majority of employees. . . .

Isolationism Charge of Reds Brings Rebuke

Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.), said yesterday that "Russia and her satellites are the greatest isolationists in the world today." He made this comment in an interview on a Moscow radio broadcast denouncing "American isolationists" and accusing them of being "originators of the idea of using economic and military might as a means of exerting pressure on other countries." . . .

Wheeler dictated this statement: "I am definitely in favor of cooperation among the great powers to prevent future wars, but cooperation is a two-way street. To speak of the governments of Bulgaria, Romania and Yugoslavia as democratic today is a huge joke. Every intelligent person who knows what is going on in those countries knows they have one of the most cruel forms of dictatorships ever imposed on a civilized people." . . .

Wheeler said that he was not a isolationist, but he was a realist. He said that the American people are a factual report of the starvation, of the slave labor, of their concentration camps, of their programs and of the many other ruthless and cruel inhumanities which they are practicing in the name of democracy. . . .

FAIRFAX COUNTY: A total of 187 building permits for construction valued at $457,505 were issued in Fairfax County during October, Revenue Commissioner James U. Kincheloe said yesterday. Meeting Here Today to Discuss National Guard Reorganization War Department policies for postwar reorganization of the National Guard will be discussed here today by the adjutants general of the States, into whose responsibility for remaking the Guard ultimately will fall. They will meet at the Statler Hotel in a special session of the Association of Adjutants General called by its president, Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh, adjutant general of Minnesota. . . .

Members of the association, it was learned, are determined to prevent, if possible, a recurrence of the difficulties which beset the Guard upon its mobilization and during its training. It is expected also that an effort will be made to devise some means of preventing the loss of identity which Guard units suffered when they were merged into the Army for World War II. . . .

Many of the 38,000 people in and around Washington who are waiting for telephone service are now asking, "When will I get my telephone?"

We want all to know that we have each and every application before us—that they will be filled as quickly as facilities can be provided.

Though we are making good progress, more switchboard, cable and other facilities will have to be manufactured and installed before we can supply telephone service to all who want it.

We thank you for your continued patience. We will notify you just as promptly as we can serve you.

Bill Shelved Calvert Loses Move to Delay New Taxation

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—An attempt to postpone taxation of the Calvert County property until the current five-year assessment program is completed was forestalled when the proposal went to the Senate rules committee, the bill's sponsor asserted late today.

Senator J. Frank Parran (R., Calvert), who introduced the measure under the label "emergency legislation," said that his proposal was submitted to "correct the unfairness now existing in the State assessment law."

He explained that under the Maryland reassessment program, each county is subdivided into five districts, and one district is being reassessed each year.

This means, Parran said, that in Calvert County "and all over the State, the first district to be so assessed will be taxed at new values for four years more than the fifth district in the county."

"No taxation on the basis of new assessable values should be permitted," Parran added, "until the entire county is reassessed."

The senator reported that he understood the rules committee had tabled the bill as "unnecessary at this special session." He said that both members of the Calvert County House delegation, Delegates John Hall and Maurice Lusby, Republicans, and the Calvert County commissioners were in favor of his bill.

'Home-Made' Church in Va. Costs $3000

Konnarck, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—The recently decorated Laurel Valley Lutheran Church, at the foot of White Top Mountain, is constructed entirely of native Virginia materials.

The 15-inch foundation is of native field stone, and the rude spruce logs, donated by the United States Forestry Service, were cut and brought from the top of White Top and Mount Rodgers.

The Rev. H. E. Poff, who started work on the church two years ago, used a team and drag pan, and with the assistance of two parishioners, excavated the foundation. Younger men and soldiers on furlough assisted in the cutting and hauling of logs.

Women and children in the neighborhood helped saw the pine logs into blocks and shingles, and the neighbors assisted in the erection of the 40-foot spire pole, carved and topped by a cross.

Native flagstone was used in the floor of the front porch walkway, and the pastor and two boys built a stone chimney 4 feet square and 20 feet tall at the rear of the church.

All of the landscaping around the church was done by members of the church. Of the 4600 man-hours required in the construction of the entire building, 2350 were done solely by voluntary labor. Total cash expenditure for building, furnishing, landscaping, heating and lighting amounted to less than $3000.

Southern Science Association Plans Reorganization

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—Thomas B. McAdams of Baltimore, trustee of the Southern Association of Science and Industry, announced today that a reorganization meeting of the association would be held Thursday at Raleigh, N. C.

He said business would include the naming of additional trustees to the board, which is being expanded to nearly 200 outstanding businessmen, scientists and educators in 15 Southern States; the naming of an executive committee and the "streamlining" of the organization to make it comparable to the New England Council.

Lloyd C. Bird of Richmond, Va., president of SASI, who recently conferred with Gov. Millard Caldwell of Florida, said he was coordinating the activities of the Southern Governors' conference and SASI, will report.

Representatives from Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Kentucky are expected to attend.

Less Than 200,000 Vote Expected Today On High Va. Offices And 100 Legislators

Richmond, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Political oratory—1 hour and 35 minutes of it—flowed over the air waves tonight as candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and attorney general got in their last minute efforts via radio to influence the voters who will choose Virginia's top elective officials for the next 4 years between sunrise and sunset tomorrow.

A light vote of perhaps less than 200,000 is predicted by politicians. Polls will open at sunrise and close at sunset, these times varying slightly in the eastern and western parts of the State. The weather man has predicted fair and warmer weather for tomorrow.

The Democrats put on a pre-election party with a State-wide radio network from 9 to 10 p. m. with William M. Tuck, candidate for Governor, Lewis Preston Collins, candidate for lieutenant governor and Attorney General A. P. Staples, seeking reelection, joined by State Democratic Chairman Horace Edwards, Governor Darden, Senator Byrd and State Campaign Manager W. Marshall King. There was music both vocal and instrumental, to vary the program.

GOP Also Broadcasts

The Republicans followed with State Senator Floyd Landreth of Galax, candidate for governor, broadcasting over a similar radio network from Roanoke, and Lester S. Parsons, the GOP candidate for attorney general broadcasting from Norfolk. They held the air from 10:30 to 11 p. m.

Howard Carville, independent candidate for governor, had the last word for voters, speaking over State WRVA here at 11:35 p. m. to voice his opinion of Richmond's newspapers in a five-minute talk.

The broadcasts of the two major parties reviewed the issues discussed during the campaign with the Democrats praising the record of the party in control of the State government for more than a month, and the Republicans attacking that record and what they termed rule by a machine directed by a few men.

Few War Ballots Cast

The Virginia war voters commission announced that at the close of business today only 2901 ballots had been requested by servicemen and that only 2901 ballots had been requested by returned. The commission will remain open tomorrow, State holiday, to receive and distribute in Richmond and close by areas any additional ballots which may be received.

Basing their predictions on some extent on the small amount of interest shown by servicemen, as compared with the presidential election last fall, newspapermen generally expected a small vote of perhaps no more than 175,000 to 200,000, compared with 388,000 cast for Roosevelt and Dewey in November, 1944.

Hot GOP Campaign

The Republicans have waged their most intensive campaign since Henry W. Anderson ran for Governor in 1921 and the candidate of Fairfax, candidate for lieutenant governor, and Parsons—have stumped the State for more than a month. They have emphasized the Republican platform calling for repeal of the poll tax, for changes in the State's election laws and for abolition of the administrative powers of the judiciary. The Democratic accomplishments in the fields of education, public health and penal administration have drawn their vigorous criticism.

Lieutenant Governor Tuck who put forth his stand on public questions in detail before the Democratic primary, has also stumped the State, and he has had aid from Governor Darden, who has made a number of campaign speeches, and from Senator Byrd. All of them have defended the record of the Democratic Party and have praised the Administration of the State under Democratic control. Collins, who became the party's candidate for lieutenant governor after a successful contest against the nomination of Charles R. Fenwick in the August primary, has also joined in the speaking for the Democratic ticket.

Primary Fraud Stressed

The Republicans have used the contest, against Senator Julian Gunn of Richmond Circuit Court, to throw out the vote in Wise County because of election irregularities, to emphasize their contention that Virginia election laws need a thorough overhauling, including abolition of the absentee voters' law and greater representation for the minority party in the election machinery.

Polls under Virginia's "sunrise to sunset" law will open at 6:41 a. m. and close at 5:06 p. m. in Richmond, the time varying a few minutes with the sun in the long distance between a Chincoloke Island and Cumberland Gap.

One hundred members of the House of Delegates will be chosen while two Senate vacancies will be filled. The Republicans have entered only 11 candidates for the 100 House seats and are contesting neither of the senatorial seats.

The absence of opposition in so many local contests is expected to be an important factor in the size of the vote in the State.

Jones' Gift for New U. of Va. Foreign School Is Acclaimed

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Friends, alumni and officers of the University of Virginia today acclaimed the $300,000 gift by former Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones of Houston, Tex., to the university for the establishment of the Woodrow Wilson School of International Affairs.

Gen. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marine Corps and a Virginia alumnus, in a congratulatory telegram to university officials said:

"The creation of the Woodrow Wilson School of International Affairs will be a firm step toward the goal for which we are all striving, durable peace. May I congratulate Mr. Jones and the University of Virginia on the vision and devotion to international cooperation symbolized by the founding of this project."

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy under President Wilson, who last week urged before Congress unification of the United States armed forces, sent a message in which he said that he rejoiced in the "wise and generous gift of Mr. Jones to establish the Woodrow Wilson school at the University of Virginia which preserves the spirit of America's most illustrious scholar, Chief Executive, Jefferson and Wilson."

In another communication, Senator Harry F. Byrd said the gift will not only result in much good but is a tribute to one of the greatest men America ever produced.

Hugh Leach, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond and alumni association president, voiced alumni pride that the gift will stimulate growth of study in foreign service and international affairs, and will honor the memory "of one of the university's most distinguished sons."

President Newcomb announced the gift Saturday from funds of a corporate foundation which Mr. and Mrs. Jones established in Texas some years ago for educational and philanthropic purposes.

Hospital Gets More Workers, Dispute Ends

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Dr. J. E. Barrett, superintendent of Williamsburg State Hospital here, said today that national Selective Service headquarters was sending additional men to work at the hospital to join the conscientious objector group already employed there.

The conscientious objectors already employed at the hospital last week refused to take on additional hours when hospital authorities deemed it necessary to increase the work week for male attendants to 70 hours to give additional coverage to the wards.

Selective Service, according to information here tonight, has promised to build up the staff of attendants from 40 to 50 so that the 72-hour work schedule can be continued. Eight men suspended from their duties after their refusal to work have been reinstated.

Selective Service officials held a conference here with Dr. Barrett and another meeting was held in Washington between Paul Furnas, of the American Friends Service Committee, conscientious objector program and Col. Lewis F. Kosh, deputy director of Selective Service.

O'Dunne Made Director of New Liquor Group

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—Eugene O'Dunne, former member of the Baltimore supreme bench, has been named director general of public relations for the Liquor Associates of Maryland, Inc., a recently formed organization representing wholesale and retail dealers in alcoholic beverages.

Felix V. Goldsborough, president of the new organization, proposed former Judge O'Dunne for the post. He said the selection by executives and directors was unanimous.

Goldsborough said the purpose of the organization was to "better acquaint the public with facts concerning the industry and protect our industry against unjust accusations." He added that it was also intended to protect the industry "against unfavorable legislation."

O'Dunne will be the spokesman for the association. Goldsborough fixed the total membership at more than 500, but said that within 30 days he expects 75 to 80 per cent of all license holders in the State to be enrolled. He estimated there are between 6,000 and 7,000 licensees in Maryland who are eligible for membership, including 2,500 in Baltimore City.

October Building In South Reaches New 1945 High

Baltimore, Nov. 5 (AP).—The Manufacturers Record reported today that the October value of construction contracts awarded in the 16 Southern States reached $119,202,000—the highest point of the year.

For the nine-month period of 1945, the total of $907,997,000 represented a 22 per cent rise over the comparable months of 1944.

All categories of construction, "except industrial," the magazine said, "participated in the increase recorded for October. Private building more than tripled. Highway awards almost doubled. Both public building and engineering construction showed rises of slightly less than one-quarter."

After being on display all day in Baltimore, the exhibit on wheels will go to Frederick and Hagerstown, where it will remain tomorrow. It will be on display in Cumberland all day Wednesday.

Top attractions in the touring train, which will visit 17 States, are the USS Wagon which fired the first shot after Pearl Harbor, a radar exhibit and a Navy fighter plane. Twenty-five combat veterans from the Navy, Marines, Coast Guard and Air Corps are on board.

State Senate Acts Swiftly on Crisis

For Troops Md. Senate Asks Use of Idle Ships

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 5 (AP).—Despite limitations on the introduction of bills, Maryland's special legislature received three resolutions today, one of which was adopted by a roll call vote in the Senate.

Two resolutions were sponsored in the House of Delegates, both of which were referred to the rules committee.

The Senate resolution was addressed to President Truman asking that all "available ships be used for the return of servicemen to the United States."

The Senate proposal, passed unanimously, was introduced by Senator George W. Della (D., Baltimore, Sixth) and urged that since "there are several hundred vessels in the several harbors of the United States which are idle" such ships should be used, together with any others that might be converted, to bring home all American servicemen eligible for release from overseas duty.

In the House of Delegates, Leon A. Rubenstein (D., Baltimore, Fourth) recommended, in a resolution which was referred to the rules committee of that body, that the "approximately 100,000 displaced Jews in Europe" be permitted entry by the British government into Palestine.

The third proposal by Delegate J. W. A. Evans (D., Queen Anne's) extended the Legislature's appreciation for the preparation and receipt by the House of the annual report of the State comptroller, J. Millard Taves. It was sent to the rules committee for consideration.

Senators Bowling (R., St. Mary's), Dulin (D., Anne Arundel), Southworth (D., Prince Georges), Parran (R., Calvert), and Wilmer (R., Charles) sent in an amendment to the Baltimore bill which would have excluded tobacco as a potential item of new municipal taxation.

Speaking for the amendment, which lost 22-7, Dulin declared "the people of Maryland would make a mistake even to consider a tax on tobacco."

Other legislation passed by the Senate would remove a restrictive clause from the Unemployment Compensation Act which had barred major war plants from participating in the merit rating of contributions, would extend a 20 per cent wartime bonus for Cumberland municipal employees until June 1, 1947; would authorize Cumberland to promote a $250,000 bond issue for water works improvements; would permit the town of Sharpsburg to issue $100,000 worth of bonds for water works and sewerage improvements, and would appropriate $12,000 for expense of the special session.

Convening the General Assembly today to help Baltimore's Republican administration out of a financial dilemma, Democratic Governor Herbert O'Connor told the legislators that "fortunately the affairs of our own State of Maryland are in excellent condition."

The Governor failed to exercise his prerogative of going personally before a joint assembly of House and Senate. Instead, his message was read to the separate assemblies by clerks.

"Through legislation enacted by your honorable body," O'Connor said, "Maryland has been able to face the critical needs of war, and the no less critical requirements of a postwar world, without undue strain."

"Not only are the State's fiscal affairs in the best possible shape, but likewise, the huge unemployment compensation fund, built up over the past few years to the gratifying sum of $12 million dollars, has weathered the first demands of unemployment in amazing fashion, so that today, 12 weeks after V-J Day, the fund has climbed to approximately 130 million dollars, the highest point in its history."

Text of Truman's Conference Speech

Following is the text of President Truman's address to the opening of the Labor-Management Conference yesterday:

Members of the Labor-Management Conference:

In a radio broadcast to the American people last Tuesday night, I said:

"I am convinced that labor and management will approach each other with the realization that they have a common goal, and with the determination to compose their differences in their own long range interest. It will not be long before we have put industrial strife behind us. Labor is the best customer management has; and management is the source of labor's livelihood. Both are wholly dependent on each other; and the country in turn is dependent on both of them."

This conference has been called to provide a Nation-wide opportunity to fulfill that objective. Representatives of labor and management are meeting here at this conference table, to discuss their common problems, and to settle differences in the public interest. Here is the democratic process in action in its best form.

On this conference have been based many high hopes of the American people. Their eyes are turned here in the expectation that you will furnish a broad and permanent foundation for industrial peace and progress.

I want to make it clear that this is your conference—a management-labor conference—and not a Government conference. You have not been chosen by me or any Government official. You have been selected by the leading labor and industrial organizations in the United States. There has been no interference by Government in that selection.

Called Public-Spirited

By the very nature of the task before you, you appear here as representatives merely of organizations which chose you, but as public-spirited citizens, who during the deliberation will consider the interests of all groups of all our people. Each of you is now a member of the team which the American people hope will recommend definite policy in the field of industrial relations. We must begin with the firm realization that every citizen in our Nation has an identity of interest and a great stake in the maintenance of industrial peace and in the development of mature and effective ways of achieving it.

The time has come for labor and management to handle their own affairs in the traditional, American, democratic way. I hope that I can give up the President's wartime powers as soon as possible, so that management and labor can again have the full and undivided responsibility for providing the production that we must have to safeguard our domestic economy and our leadership in international affairs.

Your Government, although it is acting as your host, has no hand in the direction or the recommendations of this conference. It has no vote. This is your opportunity to agree that you can come to an understanding, agreement without political or governmental pressure. The outcome of this conference, with the representatives of management and labor. But—as in all other public affairs—the outcome also rests with the American people who, by their interest and concern, can be a constant reminder that arbitrary selfishness and a refusal to see the other side of the view have no place in these meetings.

Country Worried

Our country is worried about our industrial relations. It has a right to be. That worry is reflected in the bills of Congress in the form of all kinds of proposed legislation. You have it in your power to stop that worry. I have supreme confidence in your ability to find a democratic way to compose industrial difficulties.

Under the patriotic pressure of a desperate war crisis, management and labor have performed a miracle of production for four years—working together voluntarily but under a measure of government of controls. Those controls must soon disappear. Many have already gone. And yet as soon as the first ones were taken off, industrial strife appeared. Some of it was expected by the American people in this period of adjustment. But I am sure that they never expected anything like the amount of strife which has been threatened. And I know that the American people do not like it—especially after the solemn promise by representatives of both management and labor that they would cooperate with their government through the reconversion period.

I make no effort to fix the blame. I have tried to lay fairly before the people the position of labor and the position of industry. They both have problems—grave and worrisome problems. But they are not insoluble problems. Essentially they are problems of adjustment to the drastic changes brought about by 3½ years of war.

The important thing is to remember that those problems—and their solution—can not be allowed to stop us in our struggle to recover from war in peace. For until we successfully recover our production capacity, we can not hope to proceed toward our goal of full employment and an increased standard of living. If labor and management, in an industry or in a company, find that they can not come to agreement, a way must be found of resolving their differences without stopping production.

Many Considerations

Finding the best way to accomplish that result without Government directive to either labor or industry—this is your job. There are many considerations involved. At the basis of them all, is not only the right, but the duty, to bargain collectively. I do not mean giving mere lip service to Seven persons, charged with operating lotteries and possessing numbers, were indicted by a District Court grand jury yesterday. The indictments were among 53 returned before Chief Justice Bostwick J. Laws. They were presented to the grand jury by Assistant U. S. Attorney Joseph F. Lawless, Jr. Six other complaints were ignored.

Those indicted on lottery charges were Robert S. Richards, 23, 1339 4th st. sw.; Walter Richards, 32, same address; Thomas J. Henry, Vienna, Va.; Patrick J. Ray Rose, same address, was indicted for allegedly having untruthfully told the court that he was a witness of the resulting accident. The other man named was Lane Maulden, no address given, who in turn is supposed to have falsely testified that Rose was on the scene.

Melville J. Eschwege, Reading, Pa., was indicted on charges of violating the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. He reportedly delivered an adulterated and mislabeled preparation to three District physicians. The preparation was said to be a substitute drug for a natural estrone hormone.

Indicted on three separate robbery charges, Roscoe C. Fields, 33, Negro, 1436 W st. nw., was accused of picking pockets on streetcars. He is said to have obtained $300 in cash and a $500 postal savings certificate.

Two men were indicted for escaping the District Jail. Karl W. Church, 36, Baltimore, Md., fled from the prison during a recreation period on the pretense of retrieving a baseball. He was jailed for illegally wearing a naval commander's uniform.

Joseph C. Shaw, 24, now reported to be in North Carolina, was sentenced for escaping in Virginia when he broke out of jail here last July.

Counties Spur Fight Against Tuberculosis

Residents of both Arlington and Fairfax Counties were reminded of the campaign against tuberculosis yesterday as county tuberculosis associations spurned their efforts to cut down the rate of the disease.

In Arlington, a booklet was distributed citing the nearly 300 known cases of tuberculosis in the county, and declaring that authoritative studies show that there are approximately nine unknown cases of tuberculosis for every known case. The booklet stated that the Arlington association, in cooperation with the county health department, maintains a chest and X-ray clinic which last year served over 8000 people and provided 1500 free X-rays. Through cooperation with school health officials in Arlington, a yearly tuberculin testing and X-ray program is held in all county junior and senior high schools.

In Fairfax, James E. Bauserman, Fairfax Tuberculosis Association president, announced the appointment of Mrs. Robert Osborn of Chesterbrook as Seal Sale chairman for 1945, and stated the county's quota in the 1945 sale drive is $12,500.

Fairfax County's X-ray program has expanded in the past year to include compulsory X-ray for all school personnel, teachers, janitors, bus drivers and cafeteria workers. Bauserman said, and next year will include voluntary X-ray of citizens in an effort to cut down the disease.

Comdr. Torrey Tokyo Raider, Reported Dead

Comdr. Philip H. Torrey, 32, highly decorated fighter pilot reported missing after a strike over Tokyo last February, was killed at that time, the Navy has notified his parents.

The son of Maj. Gen. Philip H. Torrey, commander of the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va., and Mrs. Torrey, Commander Torrey was leader of the famed Air Group 9, serving aboard the carrier Lexington.

He led his squadron on a Tokyo attack on February 16. During the raid he had a head-on crash with a Zero and later his plane disappeared. Pilots that were with him said he was last seen east of Tokyo Bay. Investigation following the surrender led to the discovery of his remains in that area.

A native of the District and graduate of the Naval Academy in 1934, Commander Torrey participated in the largest air campaigns in the Pacific, including Truk and the Marianas. He wore the Navy Cross, four Distinguished Flying Crosses and two Air Medals. The second Distinguished Flying Cross was won when his group knocked out 55 Jap planes in one day over Ra-

Moltz Family Gets Drug Aid For Meningitis

The 11 brothers and sisters of a Hyattsville child, who died from meningitis, have been given sulfadiazine treatments, doctors said yesterday.

The family of Barbara Jean Moltz, who died Saturday morning, were treated to prevent the spread of the dread disease, Dr. Lawrence Malin and County Health Officer Dr. John Byers revealed.

Dr. Byers explained that no quarantine has been ordered in the case because the disease was not discovered in time. Persons who have contacted the child would have already passed on any germs and isolation would have no value, he said.

The little girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Moltz of 4501 Decatur st., Hyattsville, complained of a stiff neck Thursday night and was treated by Dr. Malin. Malin suspected meningitis Friday, he said, and ordered the youngster to Children's Hospital where she died shortly after Friday midnight.

School nurses and teachers made a thorough check of schools attended by the Moltz children yesterday. Dr. Byers warned parents that symptoms of the disease—sore throat, fever, headaches and stiff necks—should be investigated immediately. He said carriers to the germ can infect other youngsters, who may only suffer a sore throat.

There have been four other cases of epidemic meningitis in the county this year, Byers said, but this is the first death.

Attlee Leaves Friday by Air To See Truman

London, Nov. 5 (AP)—Prime Minister Clement Attlee will leave London about 6 p. m. (1 p. m. EST) Friday by air for his Washington meeting with President Truman on control of atomic energy, it was reported today amid renewed speculation that the two leaders may also discuss the Palestine question.

Attlee again resisted demands for a statement in Commons on the Palestine problem today. He emphasized that delay should not be used as an excuse for violence.

Former Prime Minister Winston Churchill tonight accused Attlee's labor government of "fumbling ineffectively" with important problems.

Churchill accused the Labor Party of showing more desire to gain "autocratic powers" than to solve any of the pressing matters before it, and said it busies itself with "grandiose plans for a visionary future while fumbling ineffectively with practical problems that demand immediate action."

Hospital Aid

Our national health rests on four main pillars, according to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. These are medical research, preventive medicine, medical care and hospitalization. Each of these pillars is weakened by the present inadequacy of health centers and hospitals. The committee found, for example, that a community which has no hospital is often deprived also of doctors' services, for many young men in the profession refuse to practice where hospital facilities are not available.

Surgeon General Parran told the committee that 40 per cent of the counties in the United States, with some 15 million people, have no recognized hospital. Most of our hospitals have been built with private contributions. Their location has thus been erratic. The result is that we have no systematic pattern of hospital service. Medical centers and hospitals are particularly scarce in the rural areas. But many city dwellers also are deprived of these aids to health. Dr. Reginald Atwater, secretary of the American Public Health Association, told the committee that less than 10 per cent of the country's health agencies "are provided with physical facilities even approaching reasonable standards of adequacy."

The outcome of the committee's investigation is a bill authorizing Federal grants-in-aid to help the States overcome these deficiencies. It would authorize the appropriation of five million dollars for State health-facility surveys and planning and 75 million dollars a year for five years for actual construction of hospitals and health centers. The modesty of the program is indicated by the fact that in five years it could provide only about one fifth of the facilities estimated to be currently needed.

We heartily endorse the committee's recommendation of this bill for early enactment. At the same time, however, we share Senator Murray's dislike for one important administrative feature. The bill would set up a Federal Hospital Council and give it a sort of administrative veto upon the actions of the Surgeon General if he should disapprove State plans for hospital construction under the terms of the bill. An advisory group to aid the Surgeon General in making decisions, with full power to publicize its findings, would be most useful. But we do not think that administrative powers should be split in this haphazard manner. To pass such a measure while Congress is voting power to the President to eliminate confusing administrative tangles would be a grave reflection on congressional judgment. With this obvious defect corrected, the bill will hold great promise of better care for the sick in the postwar years.

USS Enterprise

What HMS Victory, Nelson's flagship, is to Britain, USS Enterprise seems destined to be for America. The President has approved Secretary Forrestal's proposal urging the preservation of the Enterprise as "a visible symbol of American valor and tenacity in war." And Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee has introduced a bill authorizing the Navy to transfer ownership of the carrier to the State of New York. Here, within sight of the Statue of Liberty perhaps, the Enterprise may now find its permanent home. The site is worthy, the honor deserved. Few ships we know of have done as much as the Enterprise has in contributing to the naval renown of this Nation. Her record is truly magnificent: nearly a thousand enemy planes destroyed and 74 enemy aircraft sunk. Naturally she did not come through her manifold campaigns unscathed; she will be laid up with a five-star Purple Heart. In peace she will be the same inspiration as she was in war, reminding the youth of today of the accomplishments of yesterday.

Of course, this great career had a name to live up to, for she is the fifth American naval vessel of this designation. There was an Enterprise in the Revolution, another in the War of 1812, yet another commanded by Stephen Decatur in the famous Tripolitanian campaign. Glory was thus hers by predilection. How nobly she added to it! It is curious how fame becomes attached to abstract entities like regiments and armies and ships, and we do not think that the officers and men who gave them life will find it that way. In this sense, of course, all who serve aboard a great ship partake of her renown. But in another sense, as we said when USS Enterprise first became a celebrity, her glory must seem to them all the greater for being above and apart from them, as the glory of a nation is above and apart from the patriot or the glory of God above and apart from the saint.

Mr. Truman's Challenge

President Truman laid a heavy charge yesterday to find a way to lead a worried country out of a new danger zone. "When industrial strife becomes widespread," he said, "all of us lose the things we need—the wages labor wants, the earnings and dividends that businessmen and investors want, the products that the consumers want." The American people are keenly aware of this fact. They have seen their hopes for a prosperous postwar era imperiled by strikes, disputes and threats, and to use the President's words, they "do not like it." They are looking to the labor-management conference to assume the status of a Moses capable of leading the country out of this wilderness.

As to the methods the conference should consider, the President was not specific. He strongly emphasized the independence of the conference and made no effort to hand it a program. Nevertheless, the President's address contained some useful hints as to what sort of policies may be expected to please the White House and the public. At the basis of all considerations, he said, is the duty as well as the right to bargain collectively. "If that fails, if bargaining produces no results," he said, "then there must be a willingness to use some impartial machinery for reaching decisions on the basis of proven facts and realities, instead of rumor or propaganda or partisan statement."

This seems clearly to imply that the President favors legislation similar to the Railway Labor Act to be made applicable to all labor disputes affecting interstate commerce. If "impartial machinery" is to be set up, it must necessarily be governmental machinery sanctioned by Congress. If the fact-finding process is to be used, it will necessarily entail the appointment of emergency boards as a last resort in cases of national significance. The President's strategy was to lay the whole burden of finding a solution upon the conference, but he opened the door for the conference to come back and say that the Government too must assume its normal responsibility of guiding and aiding the collective-bargaining process, which it has not consistently done to date.

On one point Mr. Truman was most emphatic. "Some substitute must be found," he said, "for jurisdictional strikes. Business simply cannot stop, life and property just cannot be endangered, merely because of some internal disagreement between factions of labor, in which management can rightfully have no part and no interest." Here again the Government itself has a large responsibility. It cannot reasonably say to rival labor groups that they must settle their own differences without interrupting production. If the national interest is to be protected, it must provide ways and means for the settlement of such disputes and penalize any union that refuses to abide by the rules.

We think the President has admirably outlined the issues that the conference must face. The thoughtful tone of his charge stands out in marked contrast to the attempts of Secretary Wallace and CIO President Murray to drag the wage issue into the conference. The representatives of labor and industry will risk the accomplishment of nothing if they permit themselves to be diverted from the main problem of buttressing the process of collective bargaining.

Comrades In Arms

The Mead Committee hearings of last week produced some disclosures even more sinister and shocking than the details of black-market activities carried on by a few of our naval officers stationed at Pearl Harbor. The "irregularities"—that appears to be the Navy word for it—which took place at the naval base in the handling of foodstuffs and other supplies were in all conscience bad enough. But from the point of view of the public interest and the public's confidence in the Navy as an institution, the system pursued to investigate, check and punish these irregularities is a good deal worse.

A Commander Blodgett, the Mead Committee revealed, obtained from a civilian employee in charge of the cold storage building at the Naval Supply Depot, Pearl Harbor, about 1500 pounds of meat and 500 pounds of butter and stored them in the refrigerator of the Mafine detachment on his station with a label designating them as his personal property. An unnamed admiral was shown to have negotiated the sale of $2677 worth of meat to a tavern on the islands. Senators Mead and Ferguson estimated that the loss to the Government through similar illegal transactions in the same naval district would total at least a million dollars.

In the case of Commander Blodgett, the plunder, if we may call it by so crude a term, was discovered by a Lieutenant Colonel Stickney of the Marine Corps, who reported it to the commanding officer of the depot, a Captain Dowell. The reporting was strictly in the line of the Marine officer's duty. For the performance of this duty, however, he was called a "bitchin'." It was given a poor-fitness report and was transferred from the depot. Commander Blodgett, on the other hand, after supplying two pigs for a luau, or feast, for the entire legal staff of the naval district, was put through the ritual of a court-martial by his brother officers and promptly acquitted.

The view of the court-martial appears to have been that Commander Blodgett was, after all, a jolly good fellow, as well as a handy man to have on the premises for a luau. And since it was unthinkable that an officer could be other than a gentleman—an at least a naval officer—any Marine Corps upstart who made intimations to the contrary must have been just a low bouncer unfit for the society of officers and gentlemen. And, anyway, it would be very bad for the morale of enlisted personnel to have their superiors convicted of irregularities.

This sort of mutual devotion is, of course, quite touching in a way; but it also leaves one wondering how many other irregularities have been covered up by it. And the Navy seems to have no sense of the inadequacy of a system under which accused officers are investigated and tried by brothers whose concept of esprit de corps is to hush the whole thing up. When Senator Meade suggested the establishment of a detached, independent investigating service in the Navy, Admiral Snyder asked if he had in mind "a secret service or gestapo of some kind." Apparently in the fraternal philosophy of the Navy, the reporting of misconduct on the part of commissioned members of the fraternity could be considered nothing but a gestapo trick.

The prestige of the Navy, as Senator Mead indicated, will certainly suffer a great deal more from this sort of old-school tie camaraderie than from frank disclosure and punishment of misconduct. The Navy is far too great an institution to be injured by the black-market scandal in Hawaii. It can be terribly injured, however, by a suspicion that it is deliberately covering up the sins of its commissioned elite.

Export-Import Bank

If the Senate confirms William McCleskey Martin, nominated by the President on Thursday to serve as a director of the Export-Import Bank, that important lending institution will have two of the five directors in whom Congress declared that its management shall be vested. At present, the bank has only one director, the Secretary of State, represented by Assistant Secretary Clayton.

It is very difficult to see how its business can be carried on effectively or, indeed, how it can be carried on at all.

This is particularly true since the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945, which became law three months ago, provides that "until October 31, 1945, or until at least two of the members of the board of directors to be appointed have qualified as such directors, whichever is the earlier, the affairs of the bank shall continue to be managed by the existing board of trustees." This means that the bank now has no appointed directors at all. It has no management which can make loans. It is, in fact, a mere fiction.

The Export-Import Bank was intended by Congress to be an effective instrument of foreign economic policy. Vigorously directed, it can do much to assist reconstruction abroad and through promotion of foreign trade to bolster employment at home. This vigorous direction is needed now. Selection of the four directors to be appointed by the President should have been made long before the October 31 deadline arrived. Now it is a matter of the very greatest urgency. It is time for the bank to get to work.

Rugged Era

Well, here it is, the brave new world, and we are still opening and shutting our doors (including those of the garage), raising and lowering our windows, turning on and off our water faucets, cooking our roasts a couple of hours instead of a couple of seconds, and even blowing out our matches when we light a cigarette. We had understood that electronics would do all our physical chores for us, and all we would have to do would be to sit back and think, or possibly just sit back. But now we learn that these services demand their price. If we had $30,000 we could install a range (13 feet long, 5 feet deep, 7 1/2 feet high) that would cook our roasts in two seconds—and require 150,000 watts of current. Also for a "few" thousand dollars we could install in our homes television stations that would enable us to see whether the caller at the door was a big-hearted neighbor home from a hunting trip with a brace of partridges, or the man from a collection agency.

Also we learn that the devices for blowing out our matches, opening our doors, and turning our book pages haven't been worked out satisfactorily as yet, and that probably they won't be in general use until our grandchildren's day. So it seems we shall have to continue to worry along as best we can in this old pioneer age, turning on and off our electric lights, water and radio, changing our phonograph records, operating our home movie projector and sun lamp, starting and stopping our motor cars, plugging in the vacuum cleaner, iron, mixer, dishwasher and washing machine, dialing our telephone, dropping our letters into tubes, and having to wait a few minutes for connections when we talk across the continent or the ocean.

One consolation is that our children will remember our rugged existence, and will relate to their children and grandchildren just what we went through in the days when there were no advanced electronics and no atomic energy to do everything for us. But our descendants may also point out that we in our simple existence weren't subject to the diversions and demands that harass more complex living, that we really had time to think and to live. Yes, perhaps these are the good old days and we don't know it.

NOTHING

There was nothing there, we said, which a mind could reach.
Only a faintful sky and bleached white beach.
A gnawed and weathered skeleton of land.
The brackish tide moved inward on the sand
And sand crept outward slowly, under tide.
There was nothing there to search. Nothing could hide.
All day we watched a fiber, where we set
Markers on desolation, cast his net
And drew it tirelessly forth, as if unaware
There was nothing there.

Behind The Wage Fight

By Merlo Pusey

Two Dangers Loom

THE GREAT WAGE controversy of 1945 is not merely a row about how much shall go to workers' pay envelopes. Involved also are the future status of industry and labor and the type of economy we shall have in the United States. For if industry and labor cannot agree upon a reasonable wage policy through collective bargaining, our system of private enterprise is going to crumble.

Labor is now strong enough for the first time really to enforce its demands. It can use this power to negotiate reasonable bargains with industrial management. Or it can destroy private enterprise by making demands that industry cannot meet without stirring up a cyclone of inflation.

Of course, management, too, may contribute to the undoing of our private enterprise system by resisting reasonable wage demands. It did precisely that in the twenties. John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the AFL, pointed out in a recent radio address that the volume of wages in manufacturing industries was only $11 billion in 1929, while the value of manufactured products was $10 billion dollars higher. "The economic structure collapsed," he rightly said, "principally because a balance had not been maintained between wages and prices."

A rigid policy on wages in the postwar era would undoubtedly lead to the same result. We must have a large volume of purchasing power to sustain our mass production industries. At present purchasing power is far in excess of the volume of goods that can be produced, but that is a temporary situation which does not in itself justify a shrinkage in pay envelopes.

THE DANGER that postwar adjustments will curtail wages too sharply seems to be much less acute, however, than the danger that unions will push their demands too far. In the twenties employers clearly held the trump cards. Today the trumps are in the hands of labor. The success or failure of private enterprise in the decade ahead of us will be determined in large measure by the manner in which the leaders of organized labor play their cards and by the rules that Congress provides for them.

What is most disturbing about the present situation is the tendency of labor groups to make exorbitant demands that challenge the basis on which private enterprise rests. Corporations are asked to dip into past profits to pay higher wages without regard for whether those wages can be maintained under existing price levels, in peacetime production. Profits are denounced as something evil or odious to be avoided or held to the lowest possible minimum. In many instances unions are going so far as to place obstacles in the way of production, as if they were more interested in thwarting a corporation than in the creation of more wealth in which they can share.

These policies are not merely a threat to individual employers. They are also a threat to the continued existence of American capitalism. The inescapable truth is that private enterprise must make substantial profits to survive. Without extraordinary profits in the best years, employers could not possibly continue to operate through years of slump. Some companies must even be expected to make exorbitant profits. In a competitive economy one producer of automobiles may get rich quick, another may make only small profits and another may go broke. They cannot be measured by the same yardstick. And if wages in the automobile industry should be made high enough to cut the most efficient producers' profits to a satisfactory minimum, how could the others escape bankruptcy?

In dealing with public utilities it is possible to fix a reasonable return on the investment and apply all excess earnings to rate reduction or higher wages. But these regulated industries are usually monopolies on which the public is dependent for essential service. Similar profit limitations could not be imposed on competitive and unregulated industries without danger of destroying them.

PROFITS CAN be eliminated or sharply trimmed when the Government takes over an enterprise. When there are losses, the Government can simply dip into the pockets of the people through tax laws. Russia has this system. Great Britain, too, is in the process of nationalizing some of her key industries. The United States could do likewise, but if we are going to take such a course, I think we should do it with our eyes open.

We ought not to back into a system of governmental operation of industry by making it impracticable for private enterprise to operate. Full employment under a competitive system is utterly impossible if that system must function in a hostile environment, with its rights to claim profits and accumulate capital for further investment under constant attack. In the long run there must be a national balance between wages on one hand and profits on the other. But that balance cannot be attained by draining out the fuel which makes our capitalist economy run any more than it can be by drying up the sources of purchasing power.

More Light Needed

The Dangers Of Censorship

THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT took some of the sting out of Foreign Commissar Molotov's brusque rejection of the plea of American and British correspondents in Moscow that Russia's wartime censorship on outgoing dispatches be lifted by permitting them to cable the text of their appeal as well as the fact that it had been turned down.

The action suggests that, at least, the Kremlin does not mind bringing out into the open the sharp differences of opinion that exist between foreign correspondents and the Soviet authorities on this subject of censorship. And it is certainly preferable to have an openly admitted censorship than the concealed type that obtained in Russia and certain other countries before the war.

IN THOSE DAYS correspondents were theoretically free to send news out of Moscow without the intervention of a censor. Sometimes, however, dispatches got mysteriously lost or delayed in transmission. At the same time every foreign correspondent in Russia was fully aware that if he sent his newspaper a story the Soviet authorities did not like he might be very brief.

But if open censorship is better than the concealed type, censorship of any kind constitutes a continuing threat to good understanding between nations. As Secretary Byrnes pointed out in a recent speech:

"Censorship and blackouts... breed suspicion and distrust. And all too often this suspicion and distrust are justified. For censorship and blackouts are the handmaidens of oppression."

THE FACT cannot be denied that there exists in the United States a widespread suspicion and fear of Russia. Those dangerous emotions are in part, certainly, the end product of Soviet censorship. For because of that censorship the feeling is strong that we do not know what is really going on inside the borders of the Soviet Union and not knowing we suspect the worst. Russia, so far as the American public is concerned, is another Tibet—remote, mysterious, aloof and enigmatic.

During the war there may have been cogent reasons for censorship as well as for those ironclad restrictions on the freedom of movement of correspondents in Russia that caused so much irritation among them. But the war is over and, as the foreign correspondents in Moscow pointed out to Molotov, the Soviet Union is now the only great Allied power that has retained wartime censorship.

THIS CIRCUMSTANCE certainly creates difficulties in the

Junking Our Power

IN HIS MEMORABLE speech in New York a week ago, Gen. George C. Marshall warned the Nation that what we are undergoing now is not demobilization but demoralization. The far-sighted power that we assembled during the years of the war is crumbling away so fast that it seems almost as though it had never existed.

It is hard to realize what this means. Take the Army Air Forces, for example. This country built up the biggest and the most powerful air force in the world. At the peak it included nearly 2,500,000 officers and men who fought and flew and serviced more than a hundred thousand planes.

Today there is not a combat unit that could perform a single tactical mission. Not a single unit is left intact.

The reason for this is obvious. The best pilots and the best gunners—the men around whom the units are built—are the high point men. They got out first.

BY MARCH 1 of next year the Air Force will have less than 300,000 officers and men, of whom less than 10 per cent will be skilled mechanics on the ground. This means, according to those who know best, that planes for which there are still pilots may be grounded, and the accident rate will certainly go up. Thus far, the Air Force has turned over to the RFC for disposal 32,000 planes. Eventually, up to 90,000 Army and Navy planes will be junked.

The men responsible for our Air Force are not thinking in terms of a huge postwar air armada. But they are thinking of keeping a minimum air strength that will enable this country to live up to its world responsibilities.

To implement the security provisions of the San Francisco Charter, as our airman see it, we should have 1000 long-range bombers. An adequate accompanying fighter force would include 1500 fighter planes.

The Air Force is trying to keep up to minimum strength through enlistments. But this is difficult to do for various reasons. The volunteer, having a choice of an 18-month enlistment or a three-year enlistment, naturally takes the shorter term since he can reconsider his status at the end of a year.

It takes a year to train highly skilled Air Force personnel. Those already in the service who sign up for an additional year get a three-month furlough, which means that they are available for only nine months. Putting a complicated technical service together on this basis is almost impossible.

Unhappily, the political situation in Congress is calculated to prolong the demoralization. There is a kind of log jam which can be broken only by action from the very top.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has declared himself on universal military training. All three services—Army, Navy and Air—are agreed on that, although there are important individuals who have doubts. It would not, for example, supply the needs of the Air Force where longer training is essential.

But the President has not taken a stand on unification of the services under a single civilian head. The Navy, with its powerful lobby both in and out of uniform, is opposed to unification. Although informal surveys indicate a sufficient majority in both Houses for unifying the services, the Navy manages to keep the question stirred up.

All major decisions on our future military strength are thus held in a state of suspension. Priceless time is being lost. Irretrievable combinations of strength are being broken up.

Congress is reluctant to live up to the universal training law. It is being pushed into the background. Next year is an election year. What is worrying responsible military men is that the present period of delay and uncertainty will be projected into 1948 under the shadow of the universal training dilemma.

The rest of the world is watching closely. They see Uncle Sam as an involuntary victim of a headless barber. He is being shown in his strength while almost no one pauses to notice.

Let Doctors In

Because of the shortage of medically trained personnel, especially psychiatrists, it took the District Health Department 15 months to find a physician to head its new psychiatric division. Dr. Webers, who accepted the position, owes to us from Germany, which he fled in 1933. Among the 100,000 persons who were able to survive 12 years of persecution in Germany and who are now in displaced persons camps is an unusually large proportion of physicians, nurses and physical scientists, because even Hitler found them too valuable to murder.

Professors and ministers, however, universal occupations, can immigrate to this and many other countries without quota restrictions. But at the present this country needs doctors and nurses as badly as we do scientists. The shortage of doctors in our country will, I understand, last for at least 10 more years, so that immigrating doctors would not take jobs away from native Americans. How about relaxing the quota immigration restrictions for doctors, dentists and nurses?

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

'Go Back To Spoils'

I sincerely hope that the writer of The Post's editorial, "Go Back To Spoils," will not be swayed in his convictions by Mr. Steward's denunciation on November 1. For three and one half years I have worked for a Federal establishment directly concerned with the war effort, first as a contract employee and then on Civil Service, and I know it to be a fact that the Civil Service system as at present constituted does prevent rather than promote efficient personnel administration and that it was indeed a great obstacle to the war effort. It is certainly true in this establishment that only the breakdown of the Civil Service system and the liberal recruitment of contract employees permitted the establishment to perform its necessary war functions.

Many of the men and women of the Federal service who "achieved wonders of performance in behalf of the war effort" were recruited not through Civil Service but as contract employees. During the war the Civil Service system "moved itself under the most trying conditions" to be entirely inadequate. Those who had "reason for considerable disappointment" when they read the editorial are only the uninformed or those who are so entrenched in the evils of the system that they suffer thoughts of financial panic at the suggestion of its reformation.

For Higher Taxes

Governor O'Connor's recent action cutting the income tax and the property tax in Maryland seems to be symptomatic of a current attitude on the part of governmental representatives, including the Congress of the United States.

Economy in Government, undeniably a desirable thing, seems to me to be presented too often solely as a matter of cutting taxes. Perhaps some lowering of taxes is desirable, but first we should consider taxes in the more realistic light of payment for services we receive from Government, whether city, State, or Federal, rather than as an intolerable burden for which we receive nothing.

In Defense Of Waiters

On October 30 I read in your paper that Mr. Robert G. Wilson of the Washington Restaurant Association warned "fairly" waiters and waitresses against the serving of "cold food."

Please permit me to tell Mr. Wilson to stop "passing the buck" to the employees. Instead, he should warn the restaurant owners and managers to buy some new equipment, so that the waiters and waitresses don't have to waste time running around trying to find a clean cup or saucer or teaspoon, etc. Complaints from waiters to the management are at best answered with a shrug of the shoulder or "make the best of it."

On the other hand—let the majority of the public stop "chewing the fat" over their cocktails—while the waiter has his food ready standing there—getting cold. To serve hot food properly, cooperation is as much needed on part of the public as it is on part of the establishment. To be sure, any good waiter or waitress is always endeavoring to satisfy their patrons, for obvious reasons—pecuniary ones—as well as pride in his work.

It is about time that the general public as well as those "holier than thou" restaurant owners take notice. They and they alone are to blame, not the OPA or waiters or waitresses. SURLY WAITER

Mr. Baruch Writes A Letter

MR. BARUCH must have meant to influence the financial negotiations between the British government and our own. That much is clear. Not from the contents of his letter to Representative Gore of Tennessee, but from the fact that he chose Monday of this week to publish it. For just in these days the negotiations are at that delicate and critical point where the question is whether the socialist government of Great Britain will agree, in return for a dollar loan, to make the attempt, which is difficult and full of risk, to reestablish the free international markets which our government desires.

It is still uncertain whether the views of the two governments can be reconciled. If they are not, the western world, already gravely divided from the Soviet Union, will be divided within itself. Thus the failure of Britain and America to agree on a common regime of international trade for the democracies would be a shattering blow to the unity and stability of the world.

MR. BARUCH expresses no concern about all this, and as a matter of fact his letter could hardly have been more subtly contrived to wreck the negotiations and prevent a reconciliation of the British and American views. For it incites those very suspicions on both sides of the Atlantic which stand in the way of a constructive compromise—namely, the American fear of being hooked into giving away our patrimony to foreigners, and the British fear of becoming subservient debtors of the United States.

The effect is all the more destructive in that the letter intervenes by indirection and insinuation rather than by a straightforward and explicit statement of what its author thinks should and should not be done.

MR. BARUCH is concerned—judging by his letter—with two aspects of foreign lending. The one is that we shall not extend credits which enable foreigners to buy more goods in our markets than we are able to produce for export. This would aggravate inflation. The other is that we shall not finance other countries to nationalize their industries against us. This might "destroy our own competitive system." If that is all there is to say on these two subjects, the conclusion is very simple. Make no foreign loans; then by one master stroke we shall prevent foreigners from inflating prices in our markets and from nationalizing their industries against us.

But, obviously, there is a lot more to be said on these subjects than Mr. Baruch has said. One is that while large foreign credits can, if their use is uncontrolled and uncontrolled, aggravate inflation, the stoppage of foreign purchases by refusing credits would certainly prevent the kind of full production which alone can prevent inflation. If Mr. Baruch knows any way, given the existing structure of the American economy, by which production can be maintained at a high level without very substantial exports, he knows something that no one else knows. It is, therefore, grossly misleading to talk as if foreign lending were a form of national sacrifice and charity, when in fact it is a national necessity. Yet in this letter that is exactly how Mr. Baruch talks, as if lending itself must be presumed to be an evil rather than a good.

MR. BARUCH'S remarks on the relation between American credits and the nationalization of industry abroad are hardly what might reasonably have been expected from an elder statesman. They are based on the assumption that the United States can by the use of credit control the policies of foreign governments. The assumption is as untrue as it is dangerous.

For Mr. Baruch is supposing that with American credit socialist governments abroad will be better able to nationalize industries than without American credit. But, on the contrary, the more these foreign countries with their socialist governments are isolated from the markets of the outer world and forced to rely upon their own resources, the more stringent and total will be their collectivism. It is clear that Mr. Baruch has not understood that in Great Britain it is the advanced socialists in league with the advanced imperialists who do not want Bretton Woods, who do not want the American loan. Why? Because the socialists want a closed economy which can be planned and regulated, because the imperialists want to bind the Empire together even if they have to have state collectivism to do it.

MR. BARUCH simply does not know what is going on in the world if he imagines that he can stop European socialism by threatening to withhold American credit. The threat itself will only provoke Europeans to go faster and farther toward planned self-sufficiency within a closed system which American businessmen and financiers cannot interfere with. The withholding of credit, or offering it on conditions which are political and ideological rather than economic and business-like, can only make collectivism a certainty. For in a state of economic siege or blockade within confined regions of the world, there can be little or no free and competitive enterprise.

WE ARE NOW the most conservative of the great powers. It is far from being an easy position to hold. We shall need for ourselves and for the principles we believe in, wisdom in affairs. We shall need a greater wisdom than the primitive notion that we can sit on our wealth and grow rich, or that being rich we can buy anything, including the souls of our fellow men, that we choose to pay for.

The Sisters Are Busy!

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 5.—I was sure some studio would buy "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" by Mrs. E. A. Dick and sure enough Twentieth Century has turned it over to Fred Kohlmar, who'll star Maureen O'Hara in it. Maureen's sister was all set for a contract at RKO but had to postpone her picture career because she's going back to rejoin her husband in Canada and have a baby. It's nice seeing Dean Jagger back in town. He has just made a couple of English pictures. Geraldine Fitzgerald may linger in New York to do a murder play for Leland Hayward. Margaret Clibben needn't ever worry about a home, because Chief Mountain Horse of the Blackfoot Indian tribe of Canada just sent her a tepee. And when she was in Jackson Hole, Wyo., doing "Bad Bascomb," she horned into the Shoshone Indian tribe. Jack Kirkwood thinks the song "Mood to Be Stewed" should be the "Lost Week-End's" theme song.

Back in the Groove
Harold Lloyd, who has been off the screen for years, felt he'd never left it when he did a routine with a real lion for "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock." When he got home that night, his dogs went crazy. They realized it wasn't another dog they smelled on Harold. He does a drunk scene in the picture as funny as Ray Millard's is tragic in "Lost Week-End." The barkeep never had a drink before, he mixes one to end all concoctions. During the drinking, Harold lets out a Texan yell, turns around, and says, "Feh-h-h, quiet, please." After he has been taken out, the mixer drinks what's left and ends up giving out with the same yell.

Monty Woolley With Sex
Wait till you see the former musical comedy star, Georgia Caine, playing the bearded lady. I asked Preston Sturges how he could do a thing like that to Georgia. It was the only part that ran longer than two weeks," said he, "and Georgia was my first love in the theater. Her's was the first dressing room I ever entered." One night Georgia wore the beard home to show her mother. She covered it over with a veil. She didn't know the veil had dropped off until her car was stopped in traffic and three sailors drove up beside her whooping and yelling. They followed her all the way home, and she had to prove to them it wasn't real. The day I visited the "Diddlebock" set, Sturges' lovely wife was there and met his latest discovery, Frances Ramsden. Preston sang a song which he wrote when the picture comes out. It goes something like, "Please, Mr. Diddlebock; Ouch, Mr. Diddlebock; Stop, Mr. Diddlebock." I don't know why, but "Diddlebock" slays me.

Running All Over the Lot
I went on the next stage and watched Orson Wells give some expert directions to Loretta Young and Konstantin Shayne (a refugee from "Mission to Moscow") for "The Stranger." Russ Metty, camera man, was doing his stuff as he did in "G. I. Joe." That boy sure knows his lights and shadows. Along bounced Producer S. P. Eagle and asked whether I'd seen their set on the back lot. I hadn't, so he took me out. Perry Ferguson had built part of a New England village on the spot where Sam Goldwyn's "North Star" town had been. I must say I prefer the New England atmosphere. So did the ants and a woodpecker who went to work on the prop trees, not knowing the trunks were made of cement. I felt sorry for that woodpecker—he was in a bad way. A special watchman guards the antiques in a shop on the lot. They found the huge clock which is used in the church tower at our country museum. It used to decorate the courthouse on Broadway and Temple st. and is a beauty. I asked Eagle what would happen to the set (which cost $125,000) after they'd finished, and he replied, "O, it becomes the property of Sam Goldwyn. It's his studio." That amused me because Mary Pickford owns the land, and when Sam's lease runs out she gets all the buildings, including this set.

New York, Nov. 5.—When the cast of Robert E. Sherwood's "The Rugged Path" went to the White House after the "command performance," the President noticed the Army discharge button worn by Paul Albert, in which he'll play Oliver Wendell Holmes. . . . Dionne Lewis and Gus Schirmer, jr., will produce a new musical. . . . A novelist, who had promised to send his new book to Nunnally Johnson at his International Pictures office, failed to send it. "My loss is International's gain," Johnson told the novelist, "because while I would have been reading your book, I could be writing 'DISSOLVE TO.'"

Before Jan Kiepura came East to be starred in "Polonaise" he went to the Beverly Hills Hotel and accompanied a friend to the swimming pool. Jimmy McHugh, the songwriter, was in the pool and Kiepura's friend introduced them to each other. "This is Jimmy McHugh, one of America's best song writers," he said. McHugh, still swimming, nodded. "And, Jimmy," said the mutual friend, "this is Jan Kiepura"—just then, McHugh ducked his head and started swimming under water—"one of the greatest singers that ever came to America," the friend continued. Kiepura nudged his friend and complained: "He didn't hear the last part."

Lee Segall, the pride of Houston, relays this Texan story: A Texan was discussing San Jacinto with a Yankee who asked: "What's San Jacinto?" "San Jacinto is where 3000 Texans stood off 300,000 Mexicans," said the Texan. "Not a man left his post of duty. All of them died. And then there was the Alamo." "What's the Alamo?" asked the Yank. The Texan told him: "The Alamo is where 300 Texans stood off 3000 Mexicans. Not a man left his post of duty. All of them died. Then."

The story which was printed yesterday about Spencer Tracy and his alleged differences with Bob Sherwood about the tenor of "Rugged Path" was all wrong. The screen star, whose performances in the out-of-town tryouts were hailed as the best since Barrymore, is as uncompromising as Sherwood is in his convictions. . . . Walter Reuther, the UAW official, yesterday reported that the goons who once gave him a beating in the early organization days, and against whom he appeared as prosecution witness, at last have come to him for protection jobs. . . . Raymond Massey went to WJZ to broadcast in support of Newbold Morris, and by mistake entered the studio where Henry Morgan was broadcasting. Their casual conversation was heard over the air, as Morgan directed him to the proper studio.

The space on the back page of Variety was bought by Victor Borge, the concert pianist-humorist, to thank Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Truman for their courtesy. The "courtesy" to which Borge referred took place in Washington's Constitution Hall on October 23. Borge, who was about to give a recital, was visited in his dressing room by Secret Service men who reported that the President and his wife had arrived unexpectedly and that Mr. Borge was to hurry on. But at certain time Borge couldn't find his white dress waistcoat. The Secret Service men learned of the reason for the delay, and told it to the President, who then offered Borge his gray vest. But Borge, more concerned about correct formal attire than the distinct novelty of performing while wearing a President's vest, waited instead until a motorcycle messenger brought a white waistcoat.

'The Liar' Telescopes Time on C. U. Stage; Notes of the Theater

ANY WHO MAY HAVE PERMITTED his interest in Catholic University's current production of "The Liar" to be dulled by the fear that a dramatic form that originated some four centuries ago might not lend itself too gracefully or happily to modernization and music, is doing his amusement sense a sorry disservice.

Written in the eighteenth century by Carlo Goldoni, "The Liar" marked the beginning of the end of the improvised and spontaneous commedia dell'arte by giving its familiarly recurrent characters and situations definite pattern and permanence on paper.

To this lusty work of 200 years ago, Edward Eager and Alfred Drake—the same Alfred Drake who brought luster to the role of Curly in "Oklahoma"—have accorded an adaptation that successfully telescopes time and makes possible the invaluable integration of a remarkably variegated and facile score by John Mundy, of the Metropolitan Opera, set off by lyrics contrived with Gilbertian pith and humor by Mr. Eager.

Authors and composers have so deftly interlarded the old and the new in their juggling of the centuries as to bring the unalloyed delight of a uniquely revolutionary novelty to any audience bent on capriciously crackpot fun.

The 22 songs that so thickly punctuate the action of the two acts are never out of sympathy with the many developments they embellish any more than they are out of tune with present-day tastes in melody and rhythm.

Their vocal worth is rather more than adequately, even if not as thoroughly realized by a cast whose abundant talents are more thoroughly insured to spoken drama than sung.

That Tangled Web
The pivotal and titular character in the piece is an amiable young man who, without malice, seeks to lend a brighter and livelier color to a drab life by entangling himself intricately in a web of seemingly innocent prevarications, which, as such things usually do, eventually impel him to seek the comfortable haven of his coffin as the only escape from the penalties of bigamy, the murder of his manservant, disgrace of his father and a long catalogue of other high crimes and treasons.

For quick and easy classification, "The Liar," as being presented in the campus theater through November 22, indulges the same antic spirit, and sprightly lunacy that characterized the same group's rousingly boisterous interpretation of Moliere's "The Doctor in Spite of Himself." Its earlier slapstick farce put from the cloth Goldoni helped weave.

In a score that embodies no unlistenable song, "What's in a Name?" sung by Mr. Sykes and Miss Carson; Aileen McNellis both comically and musically in fine tempo and with appropriate gusto by an especially well chosen cast.

In the title role of Lelio, Dick Sykes turns in one of his most adroit tongue-in-cheek performances, stuffing none of the laughable possibilities of the frolic and doing more than ordinarily well with his songs. Something of a tour de force is scored by Albert Geyer, as Pantalone, Lelio's father, and Anthony Messuri returns to the University theater to deliver a virtuoso portrayal of The Doctor, whose two daughters, Rosaura and Beatrice, are entrancingly acted and sung by Barbara Carson and Jean Leiser.

Disaffection
Appearing only in the final scenes of the play, Margaret Mary Tisdale registers enormously, both as singer and comedienne, as Mrs. Cleonice, whose name, if not her physical presence, is a strong influence in developments from the outset. Aileen McNellis, achieves an equal eminence in the rambling role of Colombina, maid-servant in the Doctor's household.

Jack Carr, as Arlecchino, Lelio's servant; Donald Gallagher, the bashful wooer, Florindo, and John Hurley, an admirably craven Ottavio, are others who contribute yeoman's service to a uniformly competent ensemble in which no false note is struck.

And speaking of music, the Columbia Light Opera Company's downtown box office has been moved from its former 13th st. address to 1001 K st. n.w., where, if only temporarily, it will remain long enough to manage the ticket sale for "Hit the Deck," its next production, scheduled for December 5-8 in Roosevelt Auditorium. Tickets are now available at the new address at a scale ranging from 90 cents to $1.80, including tax.

The President Applauds
And again, speaking as we were yesterday of the forthcoming annual dinner and dance of the Variety Club, down for the night of November 17, at the Willard, it seems pertinent to note that on February 14, St. Valentine's Day, President Harry S. Truman, then Vice President of the United States, was formally inducted into honorary membership in Washington Tent No. 11 and presented with a card granting him club privileges in all of the 27 Variety Club Tents in the United States.

Concerning his membership the President recently wrote Carter T. Barron, general chairman of the impending soiree:

"Dear Carter: I am delighted to know that Tent No. 11 of Variety, which has done such magnificent things in the world of charity and philanthropy, is still unwearied in good works. "The Washington Tent has labored through the years to lighten the burdens of those who sat in shadows, and particularly to brighten the lives of little ones to whom sorrow and affliction came even in childhood.

"I am proud of my membership in Variety. It is a grand organization. Variety is a little proud of its distinguished member, too!

Wanted: A new Boss...

PRONTO!

MEN WHO MANAGE the business enterprises of this country want to see these men employed. They realize the pressing urgency of swift conversion to peacetime production so that jobs can be made available to men who want to work.

But in that conversion to peace are problems aplenty... problems of finance... of distribution... of wages and prices... of methods and materials. Old methods and thinking have undergone great change... a new set of rules is in the making. There is hardly a phase of our economic structure that can be viewed in the light of pre-war operations.

Many sound decisions must be made quickly by management men. And since such decisions can only be made on the basis of facts, these men are turning to Business Week for up-to-date information. Business Week is specialized reading for business executives. It is devoted to a single editorial aim... to report events and trends having special significance to business and industry, and to interpret them in that light. No other magazine is equipped to do such a thorough job for business men, especially since Business Week is a weekly, and thus presents the news "hot."

Concentration—three-way concentration—is the essence of Business Week. First, Business Week's circulation is concentrated upon management men exclusively—a carefully identified, known group of men who manage and make decisions for American business. Second, the editorial contents of Business Week are concentrated exclusively upon business subjects. In turn, this audience of management men sees your advertising message in Business Week when they, themselves, are concentrated upon business problems. For the advertiser it is a powerful combination of values unique in the publishing field.

Supreme Court Refuses to Rule in Ward Case

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to rule whether the Government was right or wrong in seizing Montgomery Ward properties in seven cities last December 28.

The Government gave the properties back October 18. Next day it asked the court to hold that no cause of action now exists. This was done, the court vacating a United States Circuit Court decision which favored the Government, and dismissing the original complaint.

The company had pressed for a Supreme Court decision on the ground that the properties might be seized again.

The seizure followed an outbreak of strikes at some of the properties on the heels of a dispute over validity of five War Labor Board orders against Ward's, including maintenance of union membership and the checkoff system.

No Opinion Gave

The case, instituted by the Government, was disposed of by simple court order, without opinions. This was the first opinion day of the new term. The court handed down a series of decisions in which no flat dissent was registered. This is in sharp contrast to the 1944 start. Justice Jackson, absent for the Nazi criminal trials, in which he is chief United States prosecutor, took no part. Justice Burton, new member of the court, did not write any of today's opinions.

The court also ruled: 1. It will review a Massachusetts Federal Court decision on the Federal "kick back" act. This law prohibits coercing an employee to give up part of his pay. The Justice Department complained that lower court decision exempted union officials even though the payment extracted from a worker is for the "personal enrichment" of a union official.

Will Rule on Contempt

2. It will pass on the contempt conviction of the Miami Herald and its associate editor, John D. Pennekamp. They were fined in Dade County (Fla.) Circuit Court because they criticized that court.

4. It agreed to decide a Utah case involving a State's right to tax Federal subsidies received by mining companies in stimulating war production.

Profiteering Disclosed in Clothes Prices

By the Associated Press

Representative Ramspeck (D., Ga.) said yesterday there was profiteering in the manufacture and merchandizing of many items of clothing.

He commented when the House Labor Committee heard from Claudius T. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, on what Murchison described as "ghostly" mark-ups on such things as men's shirts and women's dresses.

Murchison testified he saw in a New York store last week a plain gabardine dress priced at $98.95, while he estimated the actual cost of fabric in the dress at "not more than $3." The same dress, he said, could not possibly cost more than $30 before the war.

The textile industry representative testified also that he found a plain shirt priced at $12.95, that actually had a value of less than $5.50.

Murchison said the prices of the spinning and weaving industry have been held successfully by OPA ceilings.

Ramspeck, presiding over the committee, blamed the condition on "unscrupulous" manufacturers and merchants who use slight changes in design to avoid OPA price ceilings.

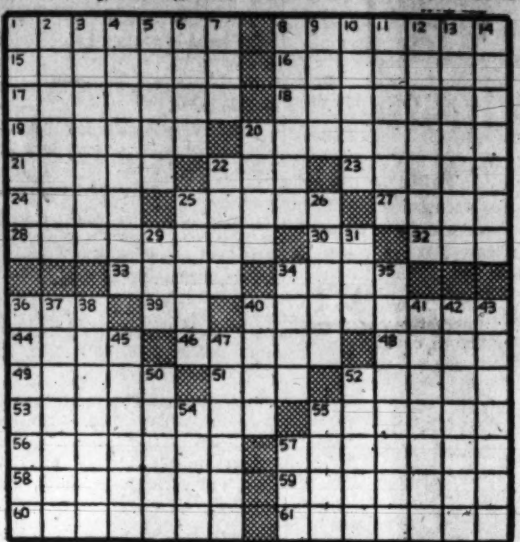

Murchison testified during consideration of legislation to raise the national minimum wage immediately from 40 cents to 65 cents an hour. He said the proposed new rates can be supported only by higher prices for cotton textiles and the products into which they are fabricated.

Park-Combing For Shelton Proves Futile

Two dozen policemen and FBI agents yesterday unsuccessfully combed Fort Stanton Park for Jay Paul Shelton, Virginia fugitive.

They were called to the scene by a nervous housewife, who stated positively that she had seen Shelton at the edge of the wooded area.

"That's him, the man I saw," Mrs. Julia Judge, of 2410 Wagner st. se., told FBI agents when they showed her pictures of the escaped prisoner.

Escaped From U. S. Marshal

Shelton, who was acquitted in Arlington September 28 on charges of attempting to rob a bank and of kidnaping a 14-year-old girl, escaped October 24 from a U. S. marshal in Richmond, Va. He was awaiting removal to Washington on an auto theft charge.

Mrs. Judge said she was near the wooded area, hanging up wash shortly after 12 noon, when she heard a rustling among the trees. She walked to the edge of the area and gasped when she looked straight at a man recognized immediately as Shelton, she said.

He threw up his arms to cover his face and fell flat on his stomach. Then he started to crawl away backward on his stomach, while she ran into the nearest apartment and called police, she said.

Gives Description

The man had very black hair, parted on the left side and slicked down. He was clean-shaven and wore no glasses. He was wearing a dark suit and no hat, according to Mrs. Judge.

The FBI and police pointed out that Shelton wore glasses and had

McCloy Lauds MacArthur Peace in Japan; German Zones Quiet

By the International News Service

General MacArthur's peaceful occupation of Japan received warm praise yesterday from Assistant War Secretary McCloy, just back from a five-week inspection tour of the Far East and Europe.

Mr. McCloy also stated that the appointment of a civil commission for the American occupation zone in Germany is "but a matter of time."

He explained that under this arrangement, American troops would function simply as an occupying force.

McCloy, top ranking War Department official to visit Japan, emphasized that MacArthur's occupation is proceeding without the slightest indication of trouble.

Far Eastern occupation problems, he said, are similar to those confronting United States administrators in Germany.

Housing, food and coal are short in Japan as well as they are in Germany, McCloy explained.

However, he declared that MacArthur is making rapid progress in working out a smoothly operating solution for all such matters.

McCloy said that bombing damage to Japan was even greater than to Germany.

"Despite the extent of destruction, however," he said, "the occupation of Japan is proceeding in a most gratifying manner."

"General MacArthur has complete control and has succeeded in bringing about an efficient and thoroughly disciplined method of occupation in which he seems to be receiving the complete cooperation of the Japanese."

The assistant secretary said that he had seen no signs of reported native uprisings in the American-occupied German zones.

"I am convinced that the situation in Germany is well in hand," he said. He added that he had given particular attention to the Jewish problem in the Reich, adding: "Everything possible is being done to assure adequate housing and food supplies for German Jews."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

ELDER Statesman Bernie Baruch revealed some interesting figures on inflation recently in an off-the-record session with 14 younger Congressmen at his Shoreham Hotel apartment. Baruch's prediction was that the Nation was hell-bent for inflation—and soon.

Piecemeal increases in wages, profits and the cost of living have been uneven, Baruch said, with wages lagging behind. For that reason he no longer favored his prewar idea of a freeze on both prices and wages. Our only hope, said the elder statesman, is that we can weather the next 6 to 9 months without running into serious inflation. If we do, our chances of a strong recovery from the war boom are good.

"The huge, pent-up demand for products which we will see during the next nine months is a very serious threat," said Baruch, stressing the importance of holding prices down.

He amazed his listeners by saying that he is completely opposed to tax reduction of any nature at this time. "Not only does the Government lose needed revenue, but it is an unhealthy thing for our general economy," argued Baruch.

Representative Andy Biemiller of Milwaukee asked what Baruch thought of the statement by General Motors President C. E. Wilson that if wages are raised 30 per cent, prices must go up 30 per cent. Baruch talked at some length on the general question of rising prices, but gave no direct answer. Finally, Biemiller repeated his question.

"I'm afraid I can't agree with Mr. Wilson," Baruch said.

Wage Not Price Increase
"ISN'T it true that industry can give a 30-per-cent wage increase without having to raise prices more than about 7½ per cent?" Biemiller persisted.

"You are approximately right," Baruch agreed. "I believe the figure you may have heard is actually 8-1-3 per cent."

Baruch also told his guests that he felt we were making a mistake in speeding manpower demobilization. "With the world in its present situation," he said, "it seems to me it would be wiser to proceed slowly with demobilization, in order that we not weaken ourselves at a time when power is apparently still an important thing."

He agreed also with an idea proposed by one of his guests, Estes Kefauver of Chattanooga, to have Cabinet members and other high officials appear on the floor of Congress where they can be questioned by Congressmen. Such a practice would make for much greater cooperation between the executive and legislative departments, Baruch said.

Present in addition to Biemiller and Kefauver were Representatives Albert Gore and Percy Priest of Tennessee, John Sparkman of Alabama, Mike Mansfield of Montana, Henry Jackson of Washington, Jerry Voorhis and Chet Holifield of California, Bob Sikes of Florida, Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, Bob Ranssbeck of Georgia, and Jamie Whitten and Arthur Winstead of Mississippi.

Churchill in Defeat

WINSTON CHURCHILL recently told friends how he felt after his defeat in the British elections. The first few days after his defeat were terrible, Churchill confessed. The very next morning he arose and fretted because there were no diplomatic cables to read. Through the war, his first morning chore was to read the top-secret military and diplomatic cables from all over the empire; and he paced up and down intermittently for days, fretting because there were no cables coming in and because, though he felt things were going wrong, there was no one to whom he could send cables to straighten things out.

"Finally I went down to the south of France," Churchill confessed. "They treated me well there. I painted several pictures and they fed me some wonderful food. But still I couldn't get over this idea of no cables coming in and no cables going out. Each morning I fretted when I read the papers. But finally one morning I felt better. It suddenly dawned on me that I wasn't Prime Minister any more and it wasn't my worry, and I've felt better ever since."

Note—Churchill's health is touch and go. His doctor has ordered him to cut down on his food and drinking.

Truman's Democratic Pals

JUST ONE morning after President Truman criticized the House Committee on Executive Expenditures for stalling on the full employment bill, its chairman, Carter Manasco of Alabama, let the White House down with a big thump.

First he harangued Secretary of the Treasury Vinson with walls that the President's accusation was unjustified. Truman could do everything the full employment bill does without legislation, he maintained. "That's an awfully big mouthful," drawled back the Secretary of the Treasury, who served in Congress for years.

Next, Manasco implied that the full employment bill would give the Chief Executive power to reduce the value of stocks and bonds.

"I just can't read that into it," shot back Vinson.

Manasco's next move was to argue that strikes caused unemployment, and the Administration ought to do something about strikes before bothering the committee.

"Well, if we had full employment as under this bill," replied Vinson, "the causes of agitation would fall off."

Finally, Manasco turned the Secretary of the Treasury over to Clare Hoffman of Michigan, one of the most reactionary and isolationist members of Congress.

"I worked for $3 a week during the Grover Cleveland depression," stormed Hoffman, "and I got along all right without a full employment bill."

Hoffman then proceeded to pummel Vinson verbally. All during this questioning, the Democrats on the committee sat silent. They gave no help to their former colleague from Kentucky.

Democratic leaders say privately that the House in its own sweet time will pass the Senate version of the full employment bill, and will authorize some boost in emergency unemployment compensation, but will not go as high as the $25 top advocated by Truman.

Truman's Double

CONGRESSMAN Luther Patrick of Birmingham stole the show at a meeting of the Arkansas State Society recently. Patrick was introduced to the audience as a man with a remarkable resemblance to President Truman—which is true. So Patrick began his address by saying: "The President and I have remarked upon that resemblance many times—in fact, the President is really a little bit vain about it."

"Friends, I have no message for you tonight," continued the Alabama Congressman. "In fact, I am perhaps the only member of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States to appear before you with no message. My colleagues all have messages."

"For instance, Sol Bloom has a great message—the message of the Constitution. Carl Vinson, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, has his message about the defense and security of our great country, which, of course depend upon a great Navy."

"John Rankin has his message—that the security and safety of our country result only from the majesty of pure Anglo-Saxon blood."

"Finally," concluded the gentleman from Alabama, "the lady from Connecticut—Clare Boothe Luce—has a great message for us. Her message is—Clare Boothe Luce."

State Offices at Stake Today As Qualified Virginians Ballot

Virginians who have paid their poll tax and who registered to vote prior to the October 8 deadline may go to the polls today and vote between the hours of 8:41 a. m. and 5:02 p. m.

Only State residents exempt from payment of a capitation tax of registration are servicemen who served in the armed forces during 1942, 1943 or 1944, and who were discharged after October 8.

In Arlington yesterday, Claude O. Thomas, secretary to the county electoral board, warned voters that the law about congregating within 100 feet of polling places would be strictly enforced in today's election.

Voters will select a governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general for State offices, as well as vote for county delegates to the Virginia General Assembly, and, in some cases, for candidates to fill local offices.

Last minute developments in the northern Virginia political scene yesterday included the announcement by the Fairfax County Voters League that members were asking legislation to provide longer hours for voting.

Mrs. John H. King, president of the league, said yesterday she has sent wires to Governor Colgate Darden, and candidates William M. Truck and J. Floyd Landreth declaring that the closing of the polls at 5:02 will "deprive working people of the opportunity to vote after working hours."

"In order to exercise their rights of franchise," Mrs. King said in her wire, "workers will have to arise early to get to the polls at 8:41 a. m. or be late for work. The Fairfax County Voters League has urged our Suffrage Commission to

D. C. Man Gets Employes Left Cash by Will Venue Change Of Dr. Shoup

A District man accused of assault with intent to rape a District woman in Prince Georges County will be tried in Montgomery County.

Llewellyn W. Reed, 35, of 829 5th st. NW, scheduled to go on trial before a Circuit Court jury at Marlboro yesterday was granted a change of venue on request of his counsel, Saul Lichtenberg and John V. Hackett. Earlier Reed was denied a continuance until the April term of court.

Reed is accused of the attempted rape of a 27-year-old Washington woman May 29 near the Marlboro Pike. The woman told police that Reed struck her with his fist and then with a soft drink bottle and threw her from the car after the attack.

The November term of court in Rockville will start Monday. Reed is free on $2000 bond.

which he stated that the paid firemen of the county should be protected "under a plan for pension and retirement similar to that which I have proposed for the police of the County."

"It is my belief," Hagan wrote, "that county employees generally should, in view of their service to the county, benefit from a pension and retirement plan. Service to the public should be recognized by providing for employees after they have given the measure of service that most employees do."

WHAT THE NEW Martin 2-0-2 MEANS TO AIRLINE MAINTENANCE MEN

FACTS FOR MAINTENANCE MEN ABOUT THE NEW MARTIN 2021

- Radio, heating and electrical equipment, as well as control cables and hydraulic lines, all are located in the belly of the fuselage—accessible through large "hatch-bay" type doors. Equipment is grouped to permit work on separate types with minimum interference.
- Accessories of rear of engine are accessible from wheel-well through removable panel on fire wall. The 202 also permits under wing pressure fueling—oil tank servicing from ground. Advantage, quick-opening panels permit inspection of vital controls.
- Pilot's and co-pilot's flight group instruments removable on wall through same wheel-well from back of instrument panel. Three-point suspension tubular engine mount is designed for maximum accessibility to engine.
- Flexible Herring fuel cells, easily removed, installed or repaired. Cable furnishings easily removable without tools.
- Special attention given to making oil parts interchangeable.
- Wherever possible right and left hand parts are identical. Thus, for example, wing-pressure fueling units of identical interchangeable parts, easily removed or installed without tools.
- Power plant mountings are designed for rapid replacement, right and left engines are interchangeable, cowls are easily removed. Flexible, long-lasting, drop-proof fueling for all fuel lines forward of firewall are specified.
- Landing gear consists of dual main wheels which are safer, lighter to handle, easily replaced—and a new style nose wheel which eliminates the complexity of the dual-wheel-type. Convenient jack points permit easy replacement of wheels and brakes—down-and-up lock arrangement is simplified, reliable.
- These are only a few of the outstanding features of the Martin 202. From them to stem this plane was designed to meet airline maintenance requirements as determined by long study of airline engine and procedures.
- The Martin 202 is engineered specifically to meet Air Transport Association specifications. Not just designed for the airline but by the airline—built by Martin—to the most exacting standards of the Air Transport Association.

With Shirley Povich

Navy may not have the best football team, but Navy is certainly the No. 1 football topic of the season. The Middles leave 'em gasping after each successive weekend. Whether they're lucky to win, or lucky to tie, the Middles never play dull football. Things always happen in Navy games this year, and one fact is irrefutable: They're still unbeaten.

The 82,000 spectators at Cleveland the other day were convinced that Navy was fortunate to get a 6-6 tie with Notre Dame, but who would say that Navy deserved to lose? You can't say that about a team that is backed up to its six-inch line and successfully defies the Irish to score on two shots at the line. You can't quarrel with that kind of football.

The cognoscenti are saying that Navy doesn't belong on the same field with Army and that December 1 ought to be a dreaded date for the boys from Crabtown on the Severn. And the suspicion is that Navy won't get past Michigan at Baltimore next weekend, but somehow it's difficult to quit on Navy particularly if you have been watching the astounding things Navy does.

Navy appeared destined to defeat in three of its last four ball games but Navy didn't lose. The Middles were pathetically helpless to mount a sustained offensive against Georgia Tech, yet scored three touchdowns on an intercepted pass, a blocked kick and a fumble. Against Penn, they were trailing 7-0, with seven minutes to play, yet won by scoring two touchdowns against a team that had been unscathed on all season.

When Notre Dame reached Navy's 6-inch line in the final minutes on Saturday, a plugged nickel would have offered the ceiling price on Navy's chances of averting defeat. The Irish had scored their first-period touchdown by ripping through Navy's line on successive plunges that totaled 34 yards, and Navy's unbeaten record appeared ready for the scrap-heap, but the Middles emerged unbeaten.

Maybe Navy is some kind of a team of destiny. The Middles intercepted only one Notre Dame pass all afternoon, but that one got Navy its touchdown when Clyde Scott whizzed 60 yards upfield with the piffling ball. It wasn't even a cleanly-intercepted pass. The ball thrown by Frank Dancewicz ricocheted off the back of a Notre Dame eligible before it skipped into the arms of Scott. The fates seemingly were on Navy's side.

The Middles were pitifully outplayed on offense. Their running attack was held to a total of 60 yards for the day. They haven't been a good running team all year, but certainly it isn't because Navy doesn't have the running backs. Clyde Scott and Bob Kelly and Jim Pettit and Bob Jenkins are known to be excellent ball carriers, but they've been hobbled by the newness of Navy's T-formation.

Navy's athletic director has suggested that at the end of Head Coach Oscar Hagberg's two-year term of duty at the end of the season, Annapolis engage a civilian coach. It's no slap at Hagberg, who came off a submarine last season and had to grapple with a squad he scarcely knew. And his team is still unbeaten this season despite the penalty that every team pays in the first year of the T-formation.

But Navy would do better with a professional coach. It's hide-bound tradition that a Navy coach must be a Navy graduate is nonsense. The better coaches devote their full time to coaching football without being burdened by Navy duties. Some Navy brass has apparently thought (1) you have to be a graduate of Annapolis before you can do anything well and (2) none but Annapolis men can be successful, and if that sounds like redundancy it's a mild word for Navy's football policy.

The Michigan game coming up at Baltimore on Saturday should be something to see. Coach Fritz Crier has brought his young Michigan team along in express fashion the last few weeks and last week they pulverized Minnesota. We think Navy will be meeting in Michigan a tougher opponent than Notre Dame, and certainly a more deceptive one.

Army had a horrible time of it against Michigan for three quarters. The young Wolverines, mixing their single wing and T-formation, had West Point baffled when West Point didn't have the ball. There's more speed in the Michigan backfield headed by Joe Penosetto than in Navy's or Notre Dame's. And Penosetto is the best defensive back we've seen in many years.

You can build up quite a case for Michigan against Navy. That's what compels one to be careful, however. Any time when the odds appear stacked against Navy, watch out. The Middles have a way with them. To date they've always managed to look all right in the most important vital statistic, the final score.

Navy Drops to Third

Army and Notre Dame Remain On Top in Nation's Grid Ranks

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Army and Notre Dame again are one-two in the weekly Associated Press poll to determine the country's ten best college football teams and thus their meeting Saturday in Yankee Stadium will be a virtual playoff for the National title.

The Cadets grabbed 86 of the first places among the 101 ball ballots counted and were listed no lower than third on any ticket. Notre Dame, held to tie by Navy Saturday, snared only three first place votes but was high enough on the remainder of the ballots to hold a narrow margin for the runner-up slot.

On a basis of 10 votes for each first place vote, nine for second, etc., the Army compiled 962 points while Notre Dame was second with 804 and Alabama bounded into third with 799.

Alabama now third. Alabama was fourth a week ago but its 80 to 19 victory over Kentucky in a Southeast Conference massacre Saturday lifted the Dixie Club to third above Navy and almost brought it second place. Alabama's climb was characteristic of the entire poll, only Army and Notre Dame retaining the position held a week ago.

Behind the Middles come St. Mary's of California, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio State, Pennsylvania and The New York Lions moved into the elite group as idle Oklahoma Much of Columbia's backing came A. & M. skidded to eleventh place from the West Coast and the Middle West.

Penn Drops to Tenth. Despite its easy victory over Princeton, Pennsylvania dropped from seventh to tenth. This weekend the Quakers are host to Columbia.

Michigan and Navy, two others in the ranking group, are carded for Saturday afternoon in Baltimore. The leading teams, determined by 10 points for each first place vote, nine for second, eight for third, etc. (First place votes in parentheses.)

Notre Dame (3) 804

Walton Given Coaching Job With 'Skins

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Frank "Tiger" Walton, veteran guard whose handwork has proved invaluable as part-time coach and player in the development of green Redskins linemen, yesterday received his reward.

"The Tiger" officially was named full time assistant line coach to Turk Edwards as one of five moves in a minor shuffling of Redskins personnel that saw Jim Watson, reserve center released via the waiver route, another player added to the roster and two others shifted to different positions.

Walton and Edwards are credited in taking the ultra-green Albert "Sweet Lelan" Lolotai, Reed Lennan and "Zip" Hanna and converting the minto three of the league's finest guards despite their inexperience. All three are expected to reach stardom next year under the tutelage of Edwards and "The Tigers."

Old Hand at Coaching

Walton, one of the Redskins of 1934 and a member of University of Pittsburgh's powerhouse in '29, '30 and '31, is no green hand at coaching. After leaving the Redskins after the '34 season he coached at Geneva College, Pa., and turned in the only victory in the Geneva ever scored over Pitt. He came back last year when the Redskins were sorely pressed for experienced and capable linemen and played regularly. This year he played part time and still is rated as one of the top defensive guards in the league.

Watson's release came as no surprise. The good-looking blond youngster from the College of Pacific impressed one and all, but the return to the club of Kl Aldrich and the official signing yesterday of Al DeMaio, former Duquesne All-American of 1941, who will join the squad today, caused the move. The lack of pro experience was the sole fault that could be found with Watson.

With Aldrich on hand and DeMaio joining the squad today, player shifts now under way will see Marvin Whitte, heretofore a center, moving back to the guard spot he once occupied to replace "Coach" Walton and Leo Pressley, former Oklahoma University fullback, who also has been performing at the pivot post, moving back to fullback, where he will spell Frank Akins and Sal Rosato.

Spot to Be Filled

The promotion of Walton, taking him off the active list, the release of Watson and the signing of DeMaio reduces the squad to 32 players, one less than the limit. The one vacancy is expected to be filled in the next day or so if a deal now on the fire goes through.

Heavy to get over the Cardinal test, Coach Dud DeGroot begins preparation today for Sunday's test here with the Boston Yanks, the only team to defeat the Redskins this year in championship competition. The Yanks walloped the Redskins, 28-20, in Boston last month and everybody regarded the score as a fluke. But after Sunday's performance against the Detroit Lions, in which the Yanks were nosed out, 10-9, the Yanks aren't to be taken so lightly.

DeGroot was displeased with the pass defense and didn't like the line play in several instances when the forwards were outfoxed and moused beyond reason but was more than satisfied with the offense, which scored 24 points for the third consecutive game.

Yale Needs One Win to Become First to Capture 500 Games

By Lou Black

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 5 (AP).—By beating Brown's footballers here Saturday, Yale can become the Nation's first team to chalk up 500 intercollegiate gridiron triumphs. Hardly another college is even close.

To reach the threshold of new taken 73 years of pushing and shoving but to many an old and young Blue, that 500th victory, when it comes, will be greeted with plenty of enthusiasm.

Yale's knights of the gridiron have won 489 games since that November 16, 1872, afternoon when Capt. Dave Schaft's stout fellows trounced Columbia by three goals. Only the Universities of Pennsylvania and Michigan can approach the Blue in this number of victories, claim Yale statisticians. Penn has vanquished 480 foes since taking up the sport in 1878, and Michigan, which started three years later, has conquered 366.

Record Envy

Yale piled up 223 victories in the 28 seasons up to the turn of the century when men were still building empires and before New York became a canyon city of steel and stone. Since then, the pace hasn't been so hot, but neither has it been too bad in the face of the "upstarts" that have come along with the growth and development of the modern game. Gridiron glory was no longer the exclusive possession of the Ivy League.

In its path toward a new chapter in a football history book, Yale has recorded 392 shutouts, 35 in a row between the final game in 1890 to near the end of the 1893 campaign, meantime scoring 1291 points.

From the finale in 1885 until the windup four seasons later, the Blue played 48 games without defeat. The only blotch on that string was a tie with Princeton in '86 but that contest was called on account of darkness with Yale leading 4-0. Under the rules of that day, unfin-

Tough Day for Jockeys at Agua Caliente Track

Alan Gray (left) was badly shaken up; Frank Wilbourn, beside him, suffered a broken arm; Bernard Pludlow, on ground near ambulance, shaken up; Bobby Warren (arrow) crushed chest and internal injuries. The spill occurred when Warren's mount, My House, fractured a leg and fell, with horses ridden by other three jockeys falling over him.

Hogan Tops North-South Golf Entries

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 5 (AP).—

Ben Hogan, fresh from his Sunday triumph in the Richmond (Va.) Open, topped a crack field of professionals here for the forty-fourth annual $5000 North and South Open golf tournament starting tomorrow.

Hogan is the favorite, but unless he can collect more pars and birdies here than at Richmond he won't be the sensation he was over the Pinehurst course three years ago.

In 1942, before entering the Army and in his last competition here, Belting Benny shot four rounds in the 60's—67, 68, 67, 69—271—to whip par by 17 strokes, set a competitive course record and win going away by five shots from Sammy Snead.

At the Richmond Benny's score was 289, four strokes ahead of Dick Metz, but five shots over par. It was the highest tally to win such an open tourney in the last year.

Vic Ghezzi, Johnny Bulla, Jimmy Hines and Snead, the others among the half-dozen leaders at Richmond, are among those here for the 72-hole stroke competition, oldest continuous open golf tournament in the country. Eighteen holes are scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday with the final 36 holes Thursday.

The competitors include a couple of veterans—Bobby Cruickshank and Gene Sarazen—who have battled par over the tough No. 2 layout for more than two decades. Cruickshank won in 1936 and 1937 and again in 1943 and was runnerup last year to Bob Hamilton. Sarazen has often been among the leaders, but has never been able to win this one.

Mrs. Graham's Horse Beaten At Belmont

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, the lipstick and reducing treatment queen, started her "second team" at Belmont today, and needed the varsity, as the annual postseason United Hunts meet brought New York racing back to something resembling normalcy after the wild waging of the regular campaign.

With the 2-year-old stars that have made her the year's top money-winning owner taking the day off, the Elizabeth Arden of the cosmetic counter relied on They Say in the Sporting Plate Handicap featuring the opening session of the two-day United Hunts show. And They Say turned out to be just a wild rumor, running a meek third behind Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Flying Phantasy, who scored by four lengths just as easily as she clicked by five in her last start.

The result was that Mrs. Graham's score for the year remained at 53 victories and $512,045 in earnings, while Phantasy clicking off the six furlongs in 1:10 4-5 down the Widener chute, picked up $3390 as the winner's bankroll.

The daughter of Psychic Bid, second choice to the crowd of $22,000, which made They Say an odds-on favorite—returned her backers $7.00 for each $2 win ticket, as she led C. J. Jones' Darby D-Day and They Say to the wire in that order.

The opening of the easy-going extra-curricular galloping—the regular 144-day season ended Saturday with $421,000,000 wagered for an average of just under three million dollars a day—saw the betting balloon settle down from the hurly-burly financial rush of the summer to something that didn't sound like a war debt. For the eight races, the crowd totaled $2,465,977 into the mutuels compared to the more than four million dollars the "iron men" chewed up for seven races Saturday at Jamaica.

Police Club No. 11 Wins First-Half Honors

Club No. 11 walked away with honors at first-half competition in the Police to Boys' Club football league came to a close Sunday.

In the 100-pound class, No. 11 defeated Club 12, 3-0, to remain undefeated and unscathed upon five starts, while in the 115-pound division, Club 11 swamped No. 10, 35-0, also to remain in unbeaten ranks.

Club 4, undefeated with five victories, is champion in the 135-pound class, after defeating Club 5, 13-0. Other results Sunday are, 100-pound class, Club 4, 4-0; 115-pound class, Club 4, 4-0; Club 5, 0; Mount Rainier, 12; Club 12, 1-0; 135-pound class, Club 11, 8; Club 10, 6; Mount Rainier, 9; Club 12, 6.

"Our job has been rationing and allocating," said Whitten, "we did not put tickets on public sale. Orders started pouring in last February. We could have filled 60,000 seats easily if we'd had them. It will be the fourth straight game to play before a capacity audience."

Former Film Director's Wife Marries Lambeau. Hollywood, Nov. 5 (AP).—Grace Nichols, former wife of Film Director Gregory La Cava, disclosed last night that she and Earl Lambeau, coach of the Wisconsin Green Bay Packers professional football team, were married here last July 16.

Mrs. Lambeau is residing here while her husband is busy with his football activities in the East.

Schacht to Entertain. New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Baseball Clown Al Schacht will head for the Pacific tomorrow where he will entertain troops of the occupation forces throughout the Pacific area.

USO-camp shows announced today. It will be the second overseas trip for Schacht who earlier entertained soldiers in the European theater. The veteran baseballer will do a solo act.

The Sports Patrol: Rumor St. Mary's, Alabama in Sugar Bowl.

By William Tucker

New York, Nov. 5 (AP).—Missed tackles, fumbled punts and quarterback "skulls" from a football observer's notebook.

Reports from New Orleans via Cajun Camie say that the smart Sugar Bowl promoters have Alabama and St. Mary's all but signed, sealed and delivered for their January 1 classic and may make the announcement any day.

That would steal the last rumble of thunder from the Rose Bowl, which is committed to the Pacific Coast Conference champion as host team and can't invite independent St. Mary's. Left with their pick of the remaining bowl classics, the Galloping Gaels naturally would gravitate toward New Orleans and its 72,000 seats for the cash customers.

As for Alabama, it is a lot less expensive and time-costing to travel from Tuscaloosa, Ala., to New Orleans than to Pasadena, although most observers think the Crimson Tide will get the Rose Bowl invitation if it waits for it. New Orleans sportsmen, however, are mighty anxious to put Harry Glimmer on display again after the Alabama's feat of eight completions in eight passing tries against Duke last January 1.

Also working toward a St. Mary's-Alabama pairing is the fact that both teams are over the major hurdles of their schedule. Alabama has only weak Vanderbilt and so-so Mississippi State while St. Mary's meets Fresno State and U.C.L.A.

Columbia drum-bearer Irving Marsh, who has been left in complete awe by the Lions' victories Saturday after Saturday while the crowds pour in at a record rate, qualifies as the season's outstanding pessimist of his craft. The Lions have been powered to six straight victories by a dozen freshman backs, with only War Veteran Len Wall giving them a leaving experience.

"Gosh, Irving," the publicist was asked at Saturday's Cornell game, "just think that those guys will be like when they get to be juniors and seniors."

Marsh mourned that such a day might never come because Columbia's 17 and 18-year-olds are subject to the draft. Hey, Irving, there's a war off. And college students are almost certain to be excluded from any remaining drafts until they have completed their courses. And they should have plenty of reason to sing "Hail, Columbia!" for at least three more years in Morningside Heights...

4-Year Old Scores by 3 Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 5.—Going over a long route for the first time in his career, John March's Occupy surprised a good field today by winning the Pimlico Merchants' Purse by three lengths. The son of Bull Dog and Miss Bunting was the longest shot in the group of seven and paid a $45.50 mutuel, while registering time of 1:46 4/5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track.

Mrs. E. H. Augustus Fiddlers Bit was second and a length in advance of J. L. Friedman's Milcave, Morris Wexler's Westminster and Calumet Farm's Miss Keeneland drew the majority of mutual backing but failed to show anything resembling good form. Westminster had early speed and finished last, while Keeneland rallied mildly to be fourth.

Wagner Rides Occupy. Jockey Joe Wagner rode Occupy and turned in a good job. He had the 4-year-old forwardly placed while Easy Chance and Fiddlers Bit did most of the front running. Fiddlers Bit finally shook off Easy Chance, but at this point Wagner put Occupy to a drive and the colt was an easy winner.

G. E. Harris' Time Burner jolted the talent in the first race by getting home at an $84.90 mutuel. The son of Time Maker got up in the final strides to take a neck-pot finish from R. A. Chapman's Baylette. Two lengths farther back came W. F. North's Tintrel to be third in the limit field of a dozen cheap sprinters. Time Burner, well handled by Apprentice W. Cherry, was clocked in 1:15 2-5.

Wary Flight Scores. Baylette set most of the pace with Time Burner always within striking distance. In the stretch, Baylette weakened and Time Burner rallied to be up in the concluding strides. C. E. Tuttle's Wary Flight, making the fourth start of his career, was a half length winner of the second race which drew a field of 10 juveniles. Second position went to the Gardenia Stable's Prince Canter a half length in advance of J. E. Hughes' Strato Search. Wary Flight shook off Late Time to take command, set a good pace but was drifting out in the stretch. Prince Canter was slightly bothered by the winner inside the 16th pole but no objection was made. Wary Flight was clocked in 1:15 and paid $8.60.

The daily double on Time Burner and Wary Flight paid $396.40.

BETWEEN RACES—War Date, a filly owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, has been added to the list of probable starters in the $25,000 Pimlico Special on November 17. The invitation has been accepted and she joins six others already in line: Armed, Pot o' Luck, Polysan, Stymie, First Fiddle and Gallotree. . . . Pot o' Luck has been assigned top weight of 126 pounds in the $10,000 added Exterminator Handicap at 2 miles and 70 yards, Saturday's feature. . . . Friends in the press box were pulling for Jockey Danny Socca to win the $10,000 Governor Bowie last Saturday. . . . He had won both ends of the $5000 York Handicap and a victory in the Bowie would have made him the rider on three handicaps in consecutive races. . . . I don't believe any jockey has done that. . . . However, his mount, Mug's Game, wasn't capable. . . . Apprentices Johnny Covall hopes to resume riding Wednesday. . . . He was not hurt in his recent spill but was found to be suffering from a heavy chest cold and was forced to rest. . . . Morris Wexler's Dispose broke down during a workout this a. m. . . . Frank Lucky (Zephyr) Cronin got in from Wheeling along with several jockeys who have been riding at that course. . . . Claiming hasn't been as brief here as at Laurel. . . . However, 23 horses have changed hands involving $69,000. . . . Apprentice R. Lang has recovered from a foot injury and is back in action.

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 5 (AP).—Virginia Tech's football team will have its last chance to keep in the running for a .500 season when it faces Clemson Tigers in Clemson, S. C., Saturday.

Should the Gobblers upset the Tigers and go on to down University of Richmond and VMI, their remaining opposition on the schedule they can post a season record of four wins against four setbacks. Sugar Bowl Head Says Teams Not Signed Yet

New Orleans, Nov. 5 (AP).—President A. B. Nicholas of the winter sports association, which sponsors the Sugar Bowl, said today no college had been signed to play in the New Year's Day football game. Nicholas made his statement when asked about reports that St. Mary's and Alabama already are under contract.

Tulane's lineup sounds like an old-time quarterback barking off his signals. You can yell "crouch, hoot!" and refer to the quarterback and left half of the Greenie team. . . . The crowd for "most valuable" football player should go to Tony Minial of Navy, hands down. His circus catch of a touchdown pass gives the Middles a narrow victory over his old school, Penn. And the flying mare tackle he put on Phil Colella at the goal line in the Notre Dame game certainly saved the Middles a tie in that one.

According to the consensus of those who saw the play and studied the pictures, Colella was "at" the goal line but Minial's great tackle found him out of bounds before he could nudge the pigskin across. And the referee called it right.

In Midst of Trying to Revive Faith in Man Who Pledged Reform When Proved Unfaithful, Wife Gets Hint That Triangle Still Obtains

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Aside from unfaithfulness, my husband is a grand person. That sounds odd, but somehow it is so. Every one likes him and envies me for having him. When he was unfaithful he managed so cleverly that until I lowered myself to get proof I could hardly believe my own doubts of him, and he would angrily (and quite plausibly) defend himself.

When confronted with proof, however, he admitted his guilt, applying some very strong epithets to himself, and promised to try to rebuild my faith in him. Because of an adorable, well loved child this has been attempted.

Her New Doubts Draw His Anger

MORE recently, through odd coincidence, information that could have been given only by my husband came back to me through the girl he had supposedly renounced. Naturally I concluded that he is still seeing her. A mental pain is hard to hide and much as I argued to myself that I was my own worst enemy, somehow it was reflected in my attitude.

He questioned me about it; I told him what was on my mind, what I had deduced and this made him angry, as usual. Now, if by once chance in one thousand, this time he is blameless, what can I do? For the sake of all concerned, what is to be done? Can any husband withstand such lack of faith? And can I stand this mental torture?

High Dudgeon Ill Suits Him

DEAR G. F.: If your husband were sincerely disposed to rebuild

Miss Dunbeck, John Green Are Married

The marriage of Miss Shirley Dunbeck, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles Dunbeck, Alexandria, Va., to Lieut. John Seymour Green, USMC, Tualatin, Oreg., son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Green, Jr., took place Tuesday, October 30 at 6 p. m. at the Washington Club, with the United States Navy Chaplain, Lieut. Comdr. A. Reed, USN, officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white lace fashioned along princess lines with puffed sleeves and a train. The high neckline of chiffon was headed with seed pearls. She wore an antique diamond brooch, a family heirloom. A seeded pearl Juliet cap held her three quarter veil of illusion and she carried an arm bouquet of white roses and buxus.

Mrs. Pauline Dunbeck Jennings, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a gown of ice blue taffeta and carried a bouquet of pink sweetheart roses. Other attendants were Miss Blanche Le Mar and Miss Margaret Shearer, who wore gowns of sea green net and carried colonial bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums and talismen roses.

Ensign Daniel Krausser, USNR, cousin of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Capt. Lewis Martin, USMC, and Lieut. John Nowak, USMC.

The improvised altar in front of the fireplace in one of the spacious reception rooms of the Washington Club was banked high with white chrysanthemums, fern and palms. Candlelight flickered softly as the strains of the bridal march and Mendelssohn's Recessional echoed through the high-ceilinged rooms.

A formal reception was held immediately following the wedding, and receiving with the bride and bridegroom were Mrs. Dunbeck, mother of the bride, wearing a gown of violet crepe with gold accessories.

Leaving for Portland, Oreg., where Mr. and Mrs. Green will make their home, the bride wore a traveling suit of coral and a brown seakins coat with hat to match.

The bride attended George Washington University and was a senior member of the JANGOEES. Lieutenant Green attended the University of Oregon and is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

Dr. Miller to Talk To Relief Society

Dr. Louis I. Miller, medical director of the Jewish Consumptives Relief Society of Denver, will be guest speaker at the meeting of the Washington Ladies Auxiliary of the society tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center.

A dessert luncheon served by Mrs. Maurice Luria and her committee will precede the meeting. Mrs. Maurice Bernstein, custodian of financial records for the various projects pertaining to the luncheon, will issue tickets.

your confidence in him on a solid foundation. I think he would be first to recognize the fact that he has forfeited the right, for a long time to come, to get on his high horse in the event you are seized with fresh misgivings about his trustworthiness.

If, to use your word, he cannot "withstand" your involuntary relapse into distrust when unexpectedly stabbed with new circumstantial evidence that suggests he may still be retaining a confidential link with his old flame, then I say (1) he is not the reformed husband he claims to be, and (2) does not have the honesty of mind or responsibility of character to warrant that further vote of confidence he besought.

If he had indeed turned over a new leaf for love of you, if he were seriously applying himself (on a "long-as-life-lasts" basis) to the proposition of trying to rebuild your faith in him, he would be most contritely conscientious and patient about helping you overcome tag-end doubts that clutched at your mind.

Still Trying To Cover Up

HE WOULD do that as a matter of course, as part of the reconstruction job before him; also, as part of his stonement, part of the penalty he must pay, for having willfully wrecked your emotional security to its very foundations by his past infidelity, exposed and admitted.

If, by one chance in one thousand, your husband is blameless and falsely accused in the latest instance, he should be quick to forgive your error and earnestly concerned to shed light on the innocent truth, to relieve your distress. Since that was not his reaction, since he took refuge in old-time defensive anger, it is logical to infer that he has as much to conceal now as before.

Can you stand this mental torture? Well, can you? I certainly don't recommend it as a steady diet, but I see no escape from it if you stay with him and hopelessly try to bolster up a faith that you know has died, with reason. I think your mind would be easier in any case—whether you decide to separate or stay for support and a facade of companionship—if you freely acknowledge to yourself and to him your essential conviction, namely, that he is an indefatigable, unblinking two-timer and probably never will be any different, at least in relation to you. M. H.

Good Manners Taught by Mere Imitation

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred All parents want their children to be polite. But a too obvious attempt to inculcate manners makes the child obstinate, resist these efforts stubbornly.

Working in the parents' favor is the fulfillment of their desire is the child's equally natural tendency to imitate them. Other persons, with a kind desire to make others comfortable and happy, may be mannerly without knowing any of the rules of etiquette, but children are too selfish and self-centered and have to be taught, even if at first all they do is to imitate them, parrot-like.

Many of the mannerly phrases which are said so glibly and completely stereotyped "I'm happy to meet you," "Let me express my sympathy," Children will imitate these phrases if they hear them repeatedly until the time when age and understanding make it possible for them to couch them in their own words.

So it remains for parents to illustrate daily to the child what well-mannered persons say and do in any situation. Emotions and excitement are apt to deprive the child temporarily of his learned manners, and so if Ellen does not speak up her mother may say, "I know Ellen will enjoy this and she'll tell you so later."

On the contrary, if we humiliate the child and say, "You can't have this until you say 'thank you,'" we are more likely to discourage that a child becomes rude and ungracious just to express her disapproval of our demands.

Our leaflet, "Good Manners," may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with this request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

They Lowered Blood Pressure, Lost Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain Do you want to lose 20, 30, 40 pounds? Lower your blood pressure? Look and feel 10 years younger? Why not get started? You don't have to take my word that it can be done. Here are letters from those who went ahead and did it.

From Michigan . . . "Why didn't somebody tell me about the right pattern of eating years ago! Just by following the Victory Reducing Diet intelligently I found it very simple to take off 20 excess pounds. I feel like a different person."

Walking Always Beneficial From Rochester . . . "I have always been very much overweight, but through your tips on how to eat, I have lost 30 pounds. I need to lose 30 more. What do you do about large pads of fat on the inside thighline? Will walking help?"

Walking is always good exercise, but a spot of exercise will help tone the inner thigh muscles. The technique is abduction, to move one leg away from the other. It's easiest from a lying-down position. The exercises are illustrated in the leaflet Exercise for Lovely Thighs.

From Philadelphia . . . "Five months ago I decided to buckle down and count calories. It wasn't half as hard as I thought it would be. I reduced from 195 to 155 and I look and feel 10 years younger!"

Wonderful To Be Thinner A second letter from our Detroit reducer, who went from size 52 to 44 in five months . . . "It was such a thrill to read about my reducer's success in your column even if it is only between the two of us who I am. I am sorry I did not tell you about lowering my blood pressure. It went down from 189 to normal and has been normal ever since. And that got rid of those terrible headaches. My doctor is real proud of me. I wish every fat person could learn how wonderful it is to be thinner."

If you're interested in lowering your blood pressure, reducing studies have shown that taking off as little as 10 excess pounds can lower the pressure 14 points.

The Gentler Sex

By Malcolm Lindsay

The Turning Worm

(This is one of a series of interviews with outstanding women.) "I understand, Mrs. Mettle, you have been named woman of the month by the Ladies' Achievement League, for your daring in crossing streets."

"Yes, the specific award was for crossing a downtown street on a 'green light'."

"You mean a red light, don't you? Pedestrians are supposed to cross on green lights."

"That's just the point. They're supposed to, but how many of them do? Just try it some time when a stream of motor cars is rounding your corner."

"But don't pedestrians have the right of way in such cases?" "Did you ever know a pedestrian who got it? That's why I decided to go down to posterity as one who did."

"How could you ever undertake such a perilous adventure?" "It was due to planning."

"Just a minute, Mrs. Mettle. Are you a Communist?" "Not that I know of. Why?"

"Nothing at all. Go on."

"Well you see I brooded about this thing for years. I'd stood for hours on street corners trying to cross on green lights while car after car rounded the curve in front of me, most of them honking angry warnings at me. Always the light opposite would change to red before I could start across. So I started crossing on red lights—and landed in jail."

"Why didn't you get a motor car yourself—or even a bicycle—and plow through?"

"I thought of that. I even investigated the cost of an armored truck or an Army tank. But I decided that wouldn't be cricket."

"Just a minute, Mrs. Mettle. Have you—er any British connections?"

"No. I'm at least 112½ per cent American. I have one-eighth Indian blood."

"All right. Go on."

"Well, I decided to stand on principle. Here we were fighting for democracy, and the civilian—I mean the pedestrian—was being pushed around by motorists who were acting like Nazi hangmen and butchers. I decided to be the Joan of Arc of a standing car whose driver would suddenly step on the engine or move forward an inch to terrify me. I would unfurl a sign telling him where to get off."

"What did the sign say?" "I'm sorry—but I believe this interview goes through the mail. But to get on to my big day. A week ago, I decided the time was ripe since motorists were all out again throwing their weight around. Also, I got tired of constantly reading what should be done about parking problems, and never a word about how the pedestrian could get across the street."

"So you went into action?" "Yes, I chose the corner where I thought civilians—I mean pedestrians—had the toughest time, and appeared in my coat of spiked armor, which I had borrowed from a museum. When the green light came on for me to cross, I let my noisemaker off at full blast, waved a shotgun threateningly and plunged boldly forward to assert my right of way."

"Did you get it?" "Did I. Traffic coming from every direction stopped and I had the whole street to myself."

"Impossible."

"Yes, it actually happened. The civilian—or rather the pedestrian—at last was on top."

"Will you continue to wear your street crossing armor?"

"Most certainly. I intend to get mass production of such outfits. That is the way the world seems to be going—every fellow for himself—and I think it is time we people on foot got armed. In fact, I'm looking in to the possibilities of a small atom bomb for each of us."

12-Year School Term Proposed For Alexandria

Alexandria will substitute a 12-year school system for the existing 11-year system, it was disclosed yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Thomas C. Williams.

Williams said he favors seven grammar grades and five years of high school, but that a program of six lower and six higher grades is also under consideration.

He did not announce any date for the shift from the present system of seven grammar school grades and four high school grades. Williams to Be Heard

Williams will discuss the proposed change at the Alexandria Rotary Club luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today in the George Mason Hotel's Virginia Room.

Williams also announced that new bids for the construction of a $200,000 to $300,000 north wing addition to George Washington High School will be received and opened in his office at 207 S. Patrick st., at 2 p. m., November 27.

Previous proposals opened September 27, in which the lowest offer was $323,400 by M. Millmett and Associates, Inc., of Washington, were rejected by the School Board.

Williams said that the Alexandria City Council has given complete indorsement to the board's action in asking for new bids, which City Manager Carl Budwesky had questioned with the observation that "it involves the entire business policy of the city government."

All Four Bids Excessive

According to Williams, the school board, headed by its building committee members, Leonard Knight and Claude Ballenger, believe that as only four bids, all viewed as excessive, were submitted, the contractors are not placed in an embarrassing position.

Williams said that subsequent changes in the plans, involving about $20,000, will make it possible for the companies to revise their bids without violating the general rule against rebidding on the same building within a 90-day period.

The superintendent of schools said that the new bids will be opened by the State architect, Irving I. Dixon, in the presence of Williams and the school board.

Vicious prisoner "kangaroo" courts

Cruel and sex-perverted convicts in hundreds of county jails have brutal prisoner organizations. They "take charge" of the thousands of children arrested every year for petty offenses... while corrupt prison officials do little or nothing to stop them. Often children are brutally tortured; some have died. November Reader's Digest tells what you can do to see that this horrible condition doesn't exist in your jail.
